International Legal Theory and the Cognitive Turn Anne van Aaken, Moshe Hirsch, 2025-04-02 Cognitive and behavioural studies are making inroads into international law international policy and literature Firstly international practice is drawing increasingly on behavioural studies The United Nations UN and its agencies have turned to behavioural science to confront new challenges faced by the international community including the Sustainable Development Goals climate change and gender equality Similarly the World Bank and World Health Organization have created teams of experts to advise on the incorporation of behavioural insights to support their operations Other international organizations are likewise following suit Secondly the cognitive behavioural turn is generating innovative research work in disciplines neighbouring international law and is gaining similar traction in international legal scholarship Yet despite this the implications of cognitive behavioural studies for international legal theory remain under explored With few exceptions international legal theories have long failed to explicitly address the cognitive behavioural assumptions of their respective theoretical approaches To fill this gap this book systematically examines the impact of the cognitive behavioural turn on the main theoretical schools within international legal scholarship Across thirteen chapters the contributors uncover the cognitive bases of their respective theories exploring both the cognitive similarities underlying the assumptions of different theories of international law as well as the limitations of the use of behavioural science in international law theories International Legal Theory and the Cognitive Turn makes explicit the relationship between cognitive behavioral methodologies and other ways of thinking about international law including TWAIL feminist and legal realist approaches and more This is an open access title available under
