Advances in Modeling the Management of Stormwater Impacts William James, 2021-07-28 The latest book in the popular series demonstrates state of the art methods models and techniques for water quality management This book includes a CD ROM that collects hundreds of hard to find literature citations from the gray literature      Advances in Modeling the Management of Stormwater Impacts William James, 1996      Advances in Modeling the Management of Stormwater Impacts William James, Computational Hydraulics International, 1997      Reducing Peak RDII Flow Rates S. Merrill, 2003-06-30 The purpose of this research project was to examine construction projects that successfully reduced Rainfall Dependent Infiltration Inflow RDII The research began with a literature review of all published records describing RDII removal projects Initially the review identified many projects however subsequent evaluation of available information revealed several important realities First most RDII removal projects in the country go undocumented Second of the RDII removal project summaries that have been published few provide good data Third data gathering and analyses for this report were hampered by lack of documentation lost or unavailable monitoring data and weaknesses in monitoring techniques Projects with sufficient information describing the conditions before the RDII removal project received a detailed analysis In all the case studies from the six agencies presented in this report 1 document before and after RDII levels 2 quantify the RDII reduction achieved and 3 describe the cost effectiveness of the removal As more than one project was documented for some agencies a total of 12 RDII projects received review The projects examined include both those that successfully reduced RDII and those that did not In general the conclusion was that utilities run the risk of not removing significant RDII unless they address private sewer laterals The only cases examined where significant RDII was removed were those that addressed private sewers or inflow sources A major recommendation of this report was to establish a standard reporting protocol for documenting RDII removal projects This protocol details what specific information should be provided when documenting an RDII removal project and how to perform an evaluation of RDII removal effectiveness The protocol touches on issues ranging from flow meter maintenance to statistical analysis of flow data By using the proper documentation recommended in this report communities allow others who are preparing to perform similar work to examine and utilize the results of any RDII removal project This publication can also be purchased and downloaded via Pay Per View on Water Intelligence Online click on the Pay Per View icon below      Identification of Research Needs Related to Highway Runoff Management Marie Venner, National Cooperative Highway Research Program, 2004      Water Quality Vladimir Novotny, 2002-11-08 Provides all new material on urban industrial and highway pollution as well as on management and restoration of streams lakes and watershed management techniques Includes revised chapters on agricultural diffuse pollution control of urban highway and industrial diffuse pollution and wetlands considerations All regulatory data is up to date with new material provided on judicial law based on significant decisions made in recent years      Canadian Books in Print. Heaney,Robert Pitt,2000-06-27 The 20th century s automobile inspired land use changes brought about tremendous transformations in how stormwater moves across the modern urban land scape Streets and parking areas in the average urban family s neighborhood now exceed the amount of land devoted to living space Add parking office and commercial space and it s easy to understand how modern cities have experienced a three fold increase in impervious areas Traditional wet weather collection systems removed stormwater from urban areas as quickly as possible often transferring problems downstream Innovative Urban WetWeather Flow Management Systems does two things It considers the physical chemical and biological characteristics of urban runoff then describes innovative methods for improving wet weather flow WWF management systems The result of extensive research Innovative Urban Wet Weather Flow Manage ment Systems looks most at how to handle runoff in developments of the 21st century the confl icting objectives of providing drainage while decreasing stormwater pollutant discharges the impact of urban WWF on surface and groundwater such as smaller urban stream channels scoured by high peak flows sediment transport and the toxic effects of WWF on aquatic organisms the effectiveness of WWF controls including design guidelines and source and downstream controls are an important issue Innovative Urban Wet Weather Flow Management Systems looks at how source controls like biofi ltration created through simple grading may work in newly developing areas while critical source areas like an auto service facilities may need more extensive treatment strategies Focusing WWF treatment on intensively used areas such as the 20 percent of streets that handle the bulk of the traffic and under utilized parking areas is also considered Developing a more integrated water supply system collecting treating and disposing of wastewater and handling urban WWF requires innovative methods such as a neighborhood scale system that would recycle treated wastewater and storm water for lawn watering and toilet flushing or use treated roof runoff for potable purposes
