1. To help students develop their decoding skills, a first-grade teacher presents a lesson about short vowels using the concept of word families. The teacher writes “_at” on the board, and asks students to suggest letters to put in the blank. Each time the students suggest a letter, the teacher fills in the blank to form a new word and asks the class to read the word aloud. Which of the following additional activities is most likely to address the developmental levels of all students in the class?

- A. letting students take turns making sentences using the new words
- B. asking students to spell the new words aloud several times
- C. having students copy the list of new words into their writing journals
- D. providing students with cut-out letters to build more new words correct answer: D

2. Which of the following teacher strategies is likely to have the most positive influence on the social development of nine-year-old students?

- A. offering encouragement to students during challenging or frustrating activities
- B. balancing student-led and teacher-led class activities
- C. providing opportunities for students to express their feelings freely during class activities
- D. emphasizing cooperative rather than competitive student activities correct answer: D
