The Tiger That Swallowed the Boy John Simons, 2012-11-30 This book asks an important question If you were born in rural England in 1837 and died in 1901 and never travelled more than thirty miles in any direction would you have seen a hippopotamus before you died The answer is surprisingly yes In fact the roads of England were thronged with all manner of creatures There were even exotic butterfly farms Kangaroos hopped around the lawns of stately homes tigers prowled the backstreets of the East End a tapir terrorised the people of Rochdale an angry cassowary pursued a Lord as he was out for his daily ride a boa constrictor got loose in Tunbridge Wells This book is the first to explore the full and surprising extent of the exotic animal trade in nineteenth century England and its colonies It combines deep and original scholarly research with a lively style aimed at the non academic reader It looks at zoological gardens travelling menageries private menageries circuses and natural history museums to show exotic animals played a key part in the Imperial project and in the project to ensure that leisure was educational It shows how this trade was intimately connected with the tides of Empire and how as Germany rose one area of competition in which Britain came off worst was the scramble for elephants

Deviance in Neo-Victorian Culture
