Environment and Citizenship Benito Cao, 2015-03-05 The increasing awareness of the human impact on the environment is having a profound effect on the concept and content of citizenship one of the fundamental institutions that structures human relations In what is the first introduction of its kind this book provides an accessible stimulating and multidimensional overview of the many ways in which concern for the environment driven primarily by the preoccupation with sustainability is reshaping our understanding of citizenship. Environment and Citizenship is structured into three parts. Part I introduces the reader to the concept and theories of citizenship and explores the impact that environmental concerns are having on contemporary formulations of citizenship both traditional e.g. national liberal and republican and emerging e.g. cosmopolitan ecological and ecofeminist. Part II explores the practical manifestations of environmental citizenship with each chapter focusing on a particular actor: citizens, governments and corporations. These chapters include references to examples and case studies from a wide range of countries broadly categorized as belonging to the Global North and the Global South. Part III explores the making of green citizens and outlines the dominant articulations of environmental citizenship that emerge from formal education, news media and popular culture. The book concludes with a general reflection on the present and future of environmental citizenship. The book contains a variety of illustrations, boxed case studies, links to online resources and suggestions for further reading. This original and engaging text is essential reading for students and scholars of environmental politics, sustainability studies and development studies as well as for environmental activists, policy practitioners and environmental educators. Earthly Encounters Stephanie D.

Clare, 2019-08-23 Earthly Encounters develops a fuller account of the lived experience of racialized gender formation as it exists on this planet earth. It analyzes sensations: the chill of winter, the warm embrace of the wind, the feeling of being immersed in water, and a stifling sense of containment. Through this analysis in settler colonial and colonial contexts in twentieth-century North America and Africa, Stephanie D. Clare shows how sensation is unevenly distributed within social worlds and productive of racial, national, and gendered subjectivities. From revealing the relevance of phenomenology, especially in the writings of Maurice Merleau-Ponty and Frantz Fanon, to debates concerning new materialism and affect theory, Clare shows how the phenomenology of race and gender must consider both the production of the body-subject and the environment. She concludes by making a case for the continued significance of sensation in the context of the Anthropocene.
