Cassel, Rosanne Leipzig, Harvey Jay Cohen, Eric B. Larson, Diane E. Meier, 2006-05-29 Since the publication of the third edition of Geriatric Medicine extraordinary advances have occurred in the science of aging and the potential for biomedical research to give us answers to many if not most of the age related disorders that threaten the quality of life in older years At the most basic level the successful mapping of the human genome was declared complete in the fall of 2000 Understanding the map of the human genome is as important as understanding the map of genomes of important laboratory species ranging from the microscopic worms and fruit flies used in most classic genetic studies to rodents such as laboratory mice and eventually to primates on which much of the research on the aging human brain is done. The genetic maps of all of these species including our own does not answer clinical questions but it does open the door to dramatic rapid and efficient answers to questions about the genetic polymorphisms related to diseases in humans. The telomerase story also unfolded since the third edition. Telomerase is an enzyme responsible for maintaining the telomeres the redundant DNA portions at the end of chromosomes whose shortening seems to be linked directly to cell senescence apoptosis and the control over cell death which at the level of the individual cell seems to be linked to the decline of organ function and eventually aging and death within the organism.

 Radiation Therapy and Surgery in Oncology National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Institute of Medicine, Board on Health Care Services, National Cancer Policy Forum, 2016-04-16 In recent years the field of oncology has witnessed a number of technological advances including more precise radiation therapy and minimally invasive surgical techniques Three dimensional 3D stereotactic and proton beam radiation therapy as well as laparoscopy and robotic surgery can enhance clinician s ability to treat conditions that were clinically challenging with conventional technologies and may improve clinical outcomes or reduce treatment related problems for some patients Both patients and physicians seek access to these new technologies which are rapidly being adopted into standard clinical practice Such demand is often propelled by marketing that portrays the new technologies as the latest and greatest treatments available However evidence is often lacking to support these claims and these novel technologies usually come with higher price tags and are often used to treat patients who might have achieved similar benefits from less expensive conventional treatment The increased cost of novel treatments without adequate assessment of how they affect patient outcomes is a pressing concern given that inappropriate use of expensive technologies is one of the key factors that threaten the affordability of cancer care in the United States To explore these issues further the National Cancer Policy Forum NCPF of the Institute of Medicine organized a workshop in July 2015 This is the third NCPF workshop in a series examining the affordability of cancer care Participants explored clinical benefits and comparative effectiveness of emerging advanced technologies for cancer treatment in radiation therapy and surgery and potential strategies to assess the value and promote optimal use of new technologies in cancer treatment This report summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop     Advanced Therapy in Surgical Oncology
