► Schenck's case is far from unique. The Supreme Court has heard several cases in the past few years involving the First Amendment rights of protesters. In Hellman, the court ruled against the protesters, saying that the government has the right to remove protesters from its property if they are not allowed to enter. In McCoy, the court ruled in favor of the protesters, saying that the government cannot punish protesters for their speech. In Shelton, the court ruled in favor of the protesters, saying that the government cannot punish protesters for their speech.
