

The background of the entire image is a dark, apocalyptic cityscape. In the foreground, there are silhouettes of people in a desolate, debris-strewn environment. One person is in the lower left, another further back in the center, and a large, dark silhouette of a person is on the right, pointing towards the center. The ground is covered in rubble and what appears to be blood splatters. In the background, there are tall, dark buildings under a dark sky. The title 'BAND OF PREPPERS II' is prominently displayed in the upper center, and the phrase 'Life is Hope' is centered below it.

False Hope Richard A. Rettig, 2007-01-25 In the late 1980s a promising new treatment for breast cancer emerged high dose chemotherapy with autologous bone marrow transplantation or HDC ABMT By the 1990s it had burst upon the oncology scene and disseminated rapidly before having been carefully evaluated By the time published studies showed that the procedure was ineffective more than 30 000 women had received the treatment shortening their lives and adding to their suffering This book tells of the rise and demise of HDC ABMT for metastatic and early stage breast cancer and fully explores the story s implications which go well beyond the immediate procedure and beyond breast cancer to how we in the United States evaluate other medical procedures especially life saving ones It details how the factors that drove clinical use patient demand physician enthusiasm media reporting litigation economic exploitation and legislative and administrative mandates converged to propel the procedure forward despite a lack of proven clinical effectiveness It also analyzes the limited effect of technology assessments before randomized clinical trials evaluated decisively the procedure and the ramifications of this system on healthcare today Sections of the book consider the initial conditions surrounding the emergence of the new breast cancer treatment the drivers of clinical use and the struggle for evidence based medicine A concluding section considers the significance of the story for our healthcare system

Group Survival in the Ancient Mediterranean Philip A. Harland,Richard Last,2021-12-30

Philip A Harland and Richard Last consider the economics of early Christian group life within its social cultural and economic contexts by drawing on extensive epigraphic and archaeological evidence In exploring the informal associations immigrant groups and guilds that dotted the world of the early Christians Harland and Last provide fresh perspective on the question of how Christian assemblies and Judean Jewish gatherings gained necessary resources to pursue their social religious and additional aims By considering both neglected archaeological discoveries and literary evidence the authors analyse financial and material aspects of group life both sources of income and various areas of expenditure Harland and Last then turn to the use of material resources for mutual support of members in various groups including the importance of burial and the practice of interest free loans Christian and Judean evidence is explored throughout this book culminating in a discussion of texts detailing the internal financial life of Christian assemblies as seen in first and second century sources including Paul the Didache Justin Martyr and Tertullian In shedding new light on early Christian financial organisation this volume aids further understanding of how some Christian groups survived and developed in the Greco Roman world
