Literature Beginning in the 11th century the exams were conducted personally by successive kings who pursued Confucian ideals that found expression in the enormous value placed on the pursuit of wisdom and learning. In the 21st century we are both puzzled and impressed by this tradition. Puzzled by such an explicit commitment to a meritocracy in an essentially feudal society, impressed by this enthusiasm for learning and the pursuit of wisdom at the highest level of society. Yet there are also important similarities between the 11th and 21st centuries. Then as now, assessment was associated with excellence, high standards, prestige and competition; success for the chosen few, disappointment for the majority. Then as now, the pursuit of excellence was embedded in a social context that favoured the elite and determined success in terms of the predilections of the powerful. Then as now, the purpose of the assessment, the way it was conducted and its impact on society all reflected the social and economic priorities of the day.

Science the "write" Way Jodi Wheeler-Toppen, 2011. Writing skills are high on the list of real world requirements for all students, including science students. Every scientific discipline needs professionals who can ably communicate in writing. Scientists must be able to describe their proposed studies for funding considerations, track their observations and results in their own notes, describe their experimental protocols for their peers to replicate and synthesize their work to the wider world community.

Fair Isn't Always Equal, Second Edition Rick Wormeli, 2018. Differentiated instruction is a nice idea, but what happens when it comes to assessing and grading students? How can you capture student progress, growth and soft skill development and still provide an equitable grading environment? An internationally recognized expert on grading practices, author Rick Wormeli revisits these questions in this thoroughly updated second edition of Fair Isn't Always Equal: Assessment and Grading in the Differentiated Classroom. Wormeli reflects on current grading and assessment practices and how they can exist with high-stakes, accountable classrooms. Important and sometimes controversial issues are tackled constructively in this book, incorporating modern pedagogy and addressing the challenges of teaching diverse groups of students across all learning levels. Middle and high school educators will easily recognize gray areas of grading and how important it is to have a shared school vision. In this second edition, new sections address sports eligibility, honor roll, descriptive feedback techniques and gifted/talented students. Previous chapters on test questions, redos, retakes, grading scales and grading effort and behavior have been revised extensively. This important book clearly explains the principles behind best grading practices so that you're ready for all grading questions or scenarios that you may encounter in your classrooms and schools.

Assessing Student Understanding in Science Sandra K. Enger, Robert E. Yager, 2001. This is a great book. It provides real examples for teachers, school districts and teacher education programmes to assess science standards in the curriculum.
