Architecture in the Age of Printing Mario

Carpo,2017-02-10 A history of the influence of communication technologies on Western architectural theory The discipline of architecture depends on the transmission in space and time of accumulated experiences concepts rules and models From the invention of the alphabet to the development of ASCII code for electronic communication the process of recording and transmitting this body of knowledge has reflected the dominant information technologies of each period In this book Mario Carpo discusses the communications media used by Western architects from classical antiquity to modern classicism showing how each medium related to specific forms of architectural thinking Carpo highlights the significance of the invention of movable type and mechanically reproduced images He argues that Renaissance architectural theory particularly the system of the five architectural orders was consciously developed in response to the formats and potential of the new printed media Carpo contrasts architecture in the age of printing with what preceded it Vitruvian theory and the manuscript format oral transmission in the Middle Ages and the fifteenth century transition from script to print He also suggests that the basic principles of typographic architecture thrived in the Western world as long as print remained our main information technology The shift from printed to digital representations he points out will again alter the course of architecture
