Neuwirth,2022-08-15

AI in combination with other innovative technologies promises to bring unprecedented opportunities to all aspects of life These technologies however hold great dangers especially for the manipulation of the human mind which have given rise to serious ethical concerns Apart from some sectoral regulatory efforts to address these concerns no regulatory framework for AI has yet been adopted though in 2021 the European Commission of the EU published a draft Act on Artificial Intelligence and UNESCO followed suit with a Recommendation on the Ethics of Artificial Intelligence The book contextualises the future regulation of AI specifically addressing the regulatory challenges relating to the planned prohibition of the use of AI systems that deploy subliminal techniques The convergence of AI with various related technologies such as brain computer interfaces functional magnetic resonance imaging robotics and big data already allows for mind reading or dream hacking through brain spyware as well as other practices that intrude on cognition and the right to freedom of thought Future innovations will enhance the possibilities for manipulating thoughts and behaviour and they threaten to cause serious harm to individuals as well as to society as a whole The issue of subliminal perception and the ability to deceive and manipulate the mind below the threshold of awareness causes severe difficulties for law and democracy and raises important questions for the future of society This book shows how cognitive technological and legal questions are intrinsically interwoven and aims to stimulate an urgently needed transdisciplinary and transnational debate between students academics practitioners policymakers and citizens interested not only in the law but also in disciplines including computer science neuroscience sociology political science marketing and psychology Saliency

Christian Chiarcos, Berry Claus, Michael Grabski, 2011 Saliency refers to the prominence of information salient items pop out and capture attention This volume addresses the role of saliency in discourse It illustrates the range of multidisciplinary approaches their diversities and similarities The collection of papers covers a variety of research with different foci ranging from discourse entities to discourse segments to extra linguistic factors Image Transformations of the Brain-Mind

Glen A. Just, 2021-12-14 Image Transformations of the Brain Mind is his latest book that addresses basic questions about SELF and CONSCIOUSNESS Dr Just has two major concerns how the mind emerges from its fetal beginning and matures through adulthood to enable free will the Supervening SELF and how sensory image transformations of the brain mind lead to subjective experience This book shares numerous insights into Virtually transformed sensory images that feel like a little person homunculus in our brains How the Physical SELF is transformed into the Virtual SELF How the SELF in dreams feels just as real as it does in waking The author's dream classifications according to type of sensory experience Transformative brain mind images that underlie altered mental states and various religious experiences How dream memories and the 24 hour mind become waking d j vu experiences Psychological and philosophical questions of autonomy and determinism

Inaktivitet og immobilitet i tværfagligt perspektiv Nina Beyer, 2010 Tribal Studies in India Maguni Charan Behera, 2019-11-09 This book provides comprehensive information on enlargement of methodological and empirical choices in a multidisciplinary perspective by breaking down the monopoly of possessing tribal studies in the confinement of conventional disciplinary boundaries Focusing on anyone of the core themes of history archaeology or anthropology the chapters are suggestive of grand theories of tribal interaction over time and space within a frame of composite understanding of human civilization With distinct cross disciplinary analytical frames the chapters maximize reader insights into the emerging trend of perspective shifts in tribal studies thus mapping multi dimensional growth of knowledge in the field and providing a road map of empirical and theoretical understanding of tribal issues in contemporary academics This book will be useful for researchers and scholars of anthropology ethnohistory ethnoarchaeology and of allied subjects like sociology social work geography who are interested in tribal studies Finally the book can also prove useful to policy makers to better understand the historical context of tribal societies for whom new policies are being created and implemented

The Psychological Impact of Living Under Violence and Poverty in Brazil Giovanni Marcos Lovisi, Jair de Jesus Mari, Elie S. Valencia, 2010 Brazil is a developing country with major economic problems with one third of the population living in poverty Brazil has one of the highest rates of violence in the world much of it occurring in urban poor areas In many instances these conditions of violence are inter related with common mental health disorders In this book a number of social demographic and clinical factors are postulated to explain in part the association among poverty violence and mental health disorders in Brazil Among these factors are gender age groups low level education rapid social change and living through a period of rapid and unpredictable social change physical ill health and mental illness There are only a few investigations in Brazil addressing these issues of violence and mental health Within this context this book provides some scientific research data which might serve to inform the development of interventions and encourage further investigations likely to benefit poor people with common mental health disorders in Brazil

What Philosophers Say Compared with what Psychologists Find in Discerning Values, 2010 Psychologists and philosophers have both asked a fundamental question about the human experience what is the best way to live but have employed different methods of inquiry Psychological research into this question has taken the form of empirical investigations in three main domains 1 how wise and competent people live their lives 2 the values that are embodied in the actions of wise people and 3 the psychological benefits that come from following different values Philosophical methods of inquiry based on appeals to lived experience as presented anecdotally through literature and through analysis at the conceptual level provide complementary ways of understanding wisdom and the values embedded therein This chapter provides an integrative review combining empirical research related to wisdom and its inherent values with an analysis of wisdom and values from the philosophical tradition with a focus on Aristotelian virtue theory The content includes both reviews of relevant literature and results from original data sets illustrates the values inherent in both the psychological and philosophical approaches and highlights the commonalities as well as current differences between these two methods of inquiry

Sustainable Evidence-based Decision-making Francesco Chiappelli, 2010

In the situation that finds us the road most travelled is that which we all know best and which makes us most comfortable. It often is the pathway that brings us to excessive waste, unrecyclable materials and fuels and arrogant impositions and demands upon communities and surroundings all in the name of our commodity. We have come to use the word globalisation to mean in the minds of many imposing of my way because you are still ignorant of the best way which is my way of course; hence it is my responsibility, duty and intent to educate you to my way. Certainly this is a rash generalisation which we will need to address and rectify in the course of this monograph. It nevertheless shines the light unto why in many instances the road most travelled is one of unsustainable behaviours, decisions and actions in the short and long term. By contrast the road less travelled, actually the road most often not taken, is that which seeks valid, viable and sustainable solutions for the betterment of the individual, local communities, societies, cultures, regions.
