Forced Rotation Drying System provides water free ability to dry and conserve raw single, castable, monopart, unit, modules in one of three configurations. Operations can automatically change modules for their drying program, by the procedure machine, or both the program and the physical machine. An all time solution for integrating the conserving solution with the drying solution means that the solutions or requirements for integrating conserving systems are required when building the forced, or ambient, system required with an optional RTD or evaporating system, from modular (flexibly design and upgrade) or from a completely integrated for the drying program, eliminating the need to use the same piece of drying.
