The Blood of the Fathers G. Frank Lydston, 2015-07-08

Excerpt from The Blood of the Fathers A Play in Four Acts You once wrote me this Well can you and I repeat together the words of Watson to a Laodicean Timorous hesitant voice how utterly vile I hold you Voice without wrath without ruth empty of hate as of love Different notes from these O watchman blow to the midnight Loud in a deep lulled land trumpeter sound an alarm The watchman blew loud the watchman blew long without an answering call Echoes there were to be sure there are literary parrots in the Forest of Pen Land but the deaf would not hear the bugle of warning nor would the blind see the grim visaged trumpeter on the social ramparts But they are beginning to hear and see and some of the inmates of the asylum for the deaf and blind that lies in the Land of Fatuous Optimism are now even wondering if they could not blow the trumpet louder and better than the watchman himself And so all s well because the dawn is breaking and it one day will be well About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
