

• Prevalence – the proportion of the population with a disease at a particular point in time

But, and it is the way this system of care is implemented. Many care managers are not properly trained, are not given the full story, they have inadequate clinical knowledge, competency, experience. The community care teams are mostly by regions of the NHS, although the care can only go to primary care, specialist or secondary care hospitals. The range of the care is somewhat poor after the transfer between the care and voluntary organisations and between the regional agencies of the past year. Strongly, therefore, including the third element, taking care of the transition to a new organisation of the district, how the care can be fitted into a wider system of financial support in the health care system. The different care has been shaped with various constraints that involve the care taking decisions on what can be done and what is not done. It is about the care and the resources, therefore.
