Drews, F.E. Hahn, 2012-12-06

The concept of chemotherapy as originated by Paul Ehrlich is based on the premise that antiparasitic drugs must have two properties they must first bind to specific structures of the parasite which Ehrlich called chemoreceptors Subsequent to their attachment to the chemoreceptor and by virtue of this binding they must possess the capacity to kill the parasite Since the host which is to be cured of an invading parasite also contains a large number of chemoreceptors that have the potential to bind toxic compounds the task of the chemo therapist is to identify chemoreceptors of the parasite which are not represented in the host and to design drugs which bind selectively to them In this context Ehrlich called for the complete and exhaustive knowledge of all the different chemoreceptors of a certain parasite as a sine qua non for success in chemotherapy Paradoxically and in spite of the fact that chemotherapy has become a very advanced and successful therapeutic discipline few of its triumphs have been achieved by following Ehrlich's original precepts On the contrary in the overwhelming majority of cases effective drugs have been discovered without any knowledge of their chemoreceptors and these drugs themselves have conversely been used as tools to study the nature of the chemoreceptors involved In other words chemotherapy notably antibacterial chemotherapy has been successful without ever living up to the fundamental standards put forward by Paul Ehrlich Neuropsychological Evaluation of Somatoform and Other Functional Somatic Conditions Kyle Brauer Boone, 2017-03-16 This volume provides neuropsychologists with comprehensive information and specific practice recommendations for the assessment of patients with medically unexplained symptoms Official Gazette of the United States Patent Office United States. Koelle, 2013-11-11 Although the anticholinesterase anti ChE agents have only limited applications in therapy and from the viewpoint of practical significance they are more appropriately classified as toxic compounds or insecticides than as drugs in their capacity of pharmacological tools they have few equals The concept of neuro humoral transmission was originally established largely from experiments in which physostigmine or eserine was employed to protect acetylcholine ACh the transmitter of the cholinergic nerves from rapid hydrolytic destruction by acetyl cholinesterase AChE and other cholinesterases ChE's Since then a great number of additional reversible and irreversible anti ChE agents also have been indispensable in studies of synaptic and neuroeffector transmission and of other physiological processes At the same time there is practically no other class of compounds for which a mechanism of pharmacological action can be described in such concrete biochemical and physiological terms Consequently it is not surprising that a huge literature has developed on these several closely interdependent topics The assembling and proper correlation of this material for the present volume has taken the collaborative efforts of over two dozen investigators It is believed that their contributions to this end will prove invaluable to future investigators in providing a ready inclusive source of established information in defining areas where further studies are indicated and in preventing unnecessary duplication of past work How well these aims have been accomplished will be for time and the reader to judge

Die Anfänge von Weihnachten und Epiphania Hans Förster, 2007
English summary The scholarly discussion about the origins of Christmas and Epiphany usually revolves around two hypotheses The theological literature in the Anglo Saxon countries mainly favors an internal Christian context for this based on early Christian calculations whereas others usually refer to parallel pagan celebrations as the origins of both festivals Hans Forster shows that these common hypotheses for the origins of Christmas and Epiphany do not explain the situation in the fourth century German description Die wissenschaftliche Diskussion um die Entstehung von Weihnachten und Epiphania kreist meist um zwei Entstehungshypothesen Vor allem im angelsächsischen Sprachraum wird in der theologischen Literatur ein innerchristlicher Entstehungszusammenhang aufgrund von frühchristlichen Berechnungen favorisiert während sonst meist auf parallele heidnische Feiern als Anlass für die Entstehung der beiden Feste verwiesen wird Eine derartige Parallelbildung eines christlichen Festes am Termin eines beliebten heidnischen Festes wurde so die weit verbreitete Ansicht den heutigen Kenntnissen über die Inkulturation des Christentums entsprechen Hans Forster zeigt dass beide Hypothesen für die Entstehung von Weihnachten und Epiphania die Situation des vierten Jahrhunderts nicht erklären können Die Sonnensymbolik hat sicherlich zur Wahl des Festtermins entscheidend beigetragen Sie konnte dies jedoch gerade deswegen weil es eben kein paralleles römisches Sonnwendfest gab das sich im vierten Jahrhundert besonderer Beliebtheit erfreut hatte Das angeblich weit verbreitete und beliebte Sol Invictus Fest wurde vielmehr aufgrund einer höchst fragwürdigen Interpretation christlicher Quellen konstruiert eine genaue Lektüre dieser Quellen vermag jedoch zu zeigen dass es dieses Fest wahrscheinlich nicht gab zumindest hat es sich um kein verbreitetes oder beliebtes Fest gehandelt Dies bedeutet eine entscheidende Akzentverschiebung der gängigen Sicht des Christentums im vierten Jahrhundert
