Female Gothic Histories Diana Wallace, 2013-03-30 Female Gothic Histories traces the development of women's Gothic historical fiction from Sophia Lee's The Recess in the late eighteenth century through the work of Elizabeth Gaskell Vernon Lee Daphne du Maurier and Victoria Holt to the bestselling novels of Sarah Waters in the twenty first century Often left out of traditional historical narratives women writers have turned to Gothic historical fiction as a mode of writing which can both reinsert them into history and symbolise their exclusion This study breaks new ground in bringing together thinking about the Gothic and the historical novel and in combining psychoanalytic theory with historical contextualisation

The Dangerous Lover Deborah Lutz, 2006 The Dangerous Lover takes seriously the ubiquity of the brooding romantic hero his dark past his remorseful and rebellious exile from comfortable everyday living Deborah Lutz traces the recent history of this figure through the melancholy iconoclasm of the Romantics the lost soul redeemed by love of the Brontes and the tormented individualism of twentieth century love narratives The Dangerous Lover is the first book length study of this pervasive literary hero it also challenges the tendency of sophisticated philosophical readings of popular narratives and culture to focus on male coded genres In its conjunction of high and low literary forms this volume explores new historical and cultural framings for female coded popular narratives

The Cultural Studies Reader Simon During, 1999 The Cultural Studies Reader is essential reading for any student wanting to know how cultural studies developed where it is now and its future directions

Reading the Romance Janice A. Radway, 2009-11-18 Originally published in 1984 Reading the Romance challenges popular and often demeaning myths about why romantic fiction one of publishing's most lucrative categories captivates millions of women readers Among those who have disparaged romance reading are feminists literary critics and theorists of mass culture They claim that romances enforce the woman reader's dependence on men and acceptance of the repressive ideology purveyed by popular culture Radway questions such claims arguing that critical attention must shift from the text itself taken in isolation to the complex social event of reading She examines that event from the complicated business of publishing and distribution to the individual reader's engagement with the text Radway's provocative approach combines reader response criticism with anthropology and feminist psychology Asking readers themselves to explore their reading motives habits and rewards she conducted interviews in a midwestern town with forty two romance readers whom she met through Dorothy Evans a chain bookstore employee who has earned a reputation as an expert on romantic fiction Evans defends her customers choice of entertainment reading romances she tells Radway is no more harmful than watching sports on television We read books so we won't cry is the poignant explanation one woman offers for her reading habit Indeed Radway found that while the women she studied devote themselves to nurturing their families these wives and mothers receive insufficient devotion or nurturance in return In romances the women find not only escape from the demanding and often tiresome routines of their lives but also a hero who supplies the tenderness and admiring attention that they have learned not to expect The heroines admired by Radway's group defy the expected stereotypes they are strong independent and intelligent That such characters often find themselves to be victims of male aggression and almost always resign themselves to accepting conventional roles in life has less to do Radway argues with the women readers' fantasies and choices than with their need to deal with a fear of masculine dominance These romance readers resent not only the limited choices in their own lives but the patronizing attitude that men especially express toward their reading tastes In fact women read romances both to protest and to escape temporarily the narrowly defined role prescribed for them by a patriarchal culture Paradoxically the books that they read make conventional roles for women seem desirable It is this complex relationship between culture text and woman reader that Radway urges feminists to address Romance readers she argues should be encouraged to deliver their protests in the arena of actual social relations rather than to act them out in the solitude of the imagination In a new introduction Janice Radway places the book within the context of current scholarship and offers both an explanation and critique of the study's limitations National Union Catalog ,1981 Large Print Holdings of the Public Libraries in Great River Library System ,1990 The Turquoise Mask Phyllis A.
