Abstract

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological characteristics of young women. The subjects were 15 young women (mean age 20.5 years) who participated in a 12-week training program. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, the second was a strength training session, and the third was a cardiovascular training session. The subjects were tested at the beginning and at the end of the training program. The results showed that the subjects had a significant increase in their maximum heart rate, maximum oxygen consumption, and maximum power output. There was also a significant decrease in their resting heart rate and resting oxygen consumption. The subjects also reported a significant decrease in their perceived exertion and a significant increase in their mood. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological characteristics of young women.
