and universale were very innovative This reminds me of this quotation in your work It seems that languages language us Or rather we let ourselves be languaged Languages after many years limit and numb us although at the start they empower us Your metafictional and intertextual attitude to writing is quite novel and postmodern while reading your work I was reminded of Tristram Shandy

Persian and Arabic Literary Communities in the Seventeenth Century James White, 2023-06-15 Shortlisted for the 2024 British Kuwait Friendship Society Book Prize A wealth of scholarship has highlighted how commercial political and religious networks expanded across the Arabian Sea during the seventeenth century as merchants from South Asia traded goods in the ports of Yemen noblemen from Safavid Iran established themselves in the courts of the Mughal Empire and scholars from across the region came together to debate the Islamic sciences in the Arabian Peninsula's holy cities of Mecca and Medina. This book demonstrates that the globalising tendency of migration created worldly literary systems which linked Iran, India and the Arabian Peninsula through the production and circulation of classicizing Arabic and Persian poetry. By close reading over seventy unstudied manuscripts of seventeenth century Arabic and Persian poetry that have remained hidden on the shelves of libraries in India, Iran, Turkey and Europe, the book examines how migrant poets adapted shared poetic forms, imagery and rhetoric to engage with their interlocutors and create communities in the cities where they settled. The book begins by reconstructing overarching patterns in the movement of over a thousand authors and the economic basis for their migration, before focusing on six case studies of literary communities which each represent a different location in the circulatory system of the Arabian Sea. In so doing, the book demonstrates the plurality of seventeenth century aesthetic movements, a diversity which later nationalisms purposefully simplified and misread.
