Credit Crises Bruce G. Stevenson, 2024-03-07 Credit crises are catastrophic events in which banks and lenders suffer extreme losses when loans and other credit instruments default on a large scale and cause banks to fail in extraordinary numbers Massive loss of economic value ensues threatening the viability of national economies and the global financial system The most recent credit crises the 2007 Subprime Mortgage Crisis and 2007 2009 Great Recession have striking parallels to the Roaring Twenties and the Great Depression In both periods rapid increases in the value of residential real estate fueled speculation in the housing and equity markets and when the real estate bubbles burst massive recessions and unemployment followed In the eighty years between these catastrophes several other credit crises occurred including a real estate investment trust crisis in the mid 1970s and a commercial real estate crisis in the late 1980s and early 1990s Credit Crises The Role of Excess Capital provides the first definitive explanation for these repetitive catastrophes the Excess Capital Hypothesis ECH Written for bankers bank regulators finance professionals and policymakers Credit Crises provides a detailed explanation of how excess capital has been the driver of past credit crises The ECH is the definitive roadmap for mitigating credit crises and Credit Crises offers recommendations to bankers bank regulators and policymakers on how to prevent and lessen future crises

In this paper we survey the rapidly developing literature on macroprudential stress testing models The scope of the survey includes models of contagion between banks models of contagion within the wider financial system including non bank financial institutions such as investment funds and models that emphasise the two way interaction between the financial sector and the real economy Our aim is two fold first to provide a reference guide of the state of the art for those developing such models second to distil insights from this endeavour for policy makers using these models In our view the modelling frontier faces three main challenges a our understanding of the potential for amplification in sectors of the non bank financial system during periods of stress b multi sectoral models of the non bank financial system to analyse the behaviour of the overall demand and supply of liquidity under stress and c stress testing models that incorporate comprehensive two way interactions between the financial system and the real economy Emerging lessons for policy makers are that for a given sized shock hitting the system its eventual impact will depend on a the size of financial institutions capital and liquidity buffers b the liquidation strategies financial institutions adopt when they need to raise cash and c the topology of the financial network
