Between Dark Daylight Richard Marsh:

Between the Dark and the Daylight Richard Marsh, 2011-01-01 Thomas observed my aunt as she entered the room I have taken you by surprise She had Hamlet could scarcely have been more surprised at the appearance of the ghost of his father I had supposed that she was in the wilds of Cornwall She glanced at the table at which I had been seated What are you doing having your breakfast I perceived from the way in which she used her glasses and the marked manner in which she paused that she considered the hour an uncanonical one for such a meal I retained some fragments of my presence of mind The fact is my dear aunt that I was at work a little late last night and this morning I find myself with a trifling headache Then a holiday will do you good I agreed with her I never knew an occasion on which I felt that it would not I shall be only too happy to avail myself of the opportunity afforded by your unexpected presence to relax for a time the strain of my curriculum of studies May I hope my dear aunt that you propose to stay with me at least a month I return to night To night When did you come This morning From Cornwall From Lostwithiel An excursion left Lostwithiel shortly after midnight and returns again at midnight to day thus giving fourteen hours in London for ten shillings I resolved to take advantage of the occasion and to give some of my poorer neighbours who had never even been as far as Plymouth in their lives a glimpse of some of the sights of the Great City Here they are I filled a compartment with them There are nine There were nine and they were about the most miscellaneous looking nine I ever saw I had wondered what they meant by coming with my aunt into my sitting room Now if anything I wondered rather more She proceeded to introduce them individually not by any means by name only This is John Eva He is eighty two and slightly deaf Good gracious man don t stand there shuffling with your back against the wall sit down somewhere do This is Mrs Penna sixty seven and a little lame I believe you re eating peppermints again I told you Mrs Penna that I can t stand the odour and I can t This is her grandson Stephen Treen aged nine He cried in the train My aunt shook her finger at Stephen Treen in an admonitory fashion which bade fair from the look of him to cause an immediate renewal of his sorrows This is Matthew Holman a converted drunkard who has been the worst character in the parish But we are hoping better things of him now Matthew Holman grinned as if he were not certain that the hope was mutual This is Jane and this is Ellen two maids of mine They are good girls in their way but stupid You will have to keep your eye on them or they will lose themselves the first chance they get I was not amazed as I glanced in their direction to perceive that Jane and Ellen blushed This went on my aunt and into her voice there came a sort of awful dignity is Daniel Dyer I believe that he kissed Ellen in a tunnel Please ma am cried Ellen and her manner bore the hall mark of truth it wasn t me that I m sure Then it was Jane which does not alter the case in the least In saying this it seemed to me that from Ellen s point of view my aunt was illogical I am not certain that I ought to have brought him with us but since I have we must make the best of it I only hope that he will not kiss young women when he is in the streets with me I also hoped in the privacy of my own breast that he would not kiss young women while he was in the streets with me at least when it remained broad day This continued my aunt leaving Daniel
