1. Turn the front wheel full right. Turn the idle cable adjuster counterclockwise until the cable housing just touches the spring in the cable guide (see next step). Work the throttle grip to verify that the throttle cable returns to the idle position when released. If the cable does not return to idle, turn the cable adjuster clockwise slightly until the correct response is achieved. Tighten pins nut against the cable adjuster and cover cable adjuster mechanism with rubber boot.
2. Verify that the throttle control operates freely without binding. With the throttle adjuster screw backed off, the throttle grip must freely return to the closed idle position. The throttle control also must open and close freely when the front wheel is turned to both the right and left lock stops. If the throttle grip does not return to the idle position freely, check the adjuster screw tension (if present). If the adjuster screw is backed off, inspect the cables for short bends.
