The Jackaroo Owen Genty, 2006-01 Jackaroo n a male station hand That is according to the Australian Slang Dictionary whereas the Macquarie Dictionary gives a more realistic version A jack of all trades Certainly a jackaroo is far more than a male station hand which will be evident as the reader moves through this recount of the writer's five years of Station Management Apprenticeship possibly a more precise definition of the word Station being a large sheep and or cattle property ranch The origin of the word jackaroo has been debated as long as the word has been in existence but the most popular belief is that early English migrants who worked on stations in the Australian Outback were given the name of Jack Raw being raw to the ways of the Australian bush One such English migrant whose name was Jack Carew may have had an influence on the foundation of the word There is also the more recent female counterpart known as a jillaroo It is however generally agreed that the word has no connection with the famed Australian icon the kangaroo Motor Cycling and Motoring, 1971

However not all countries are equal and this book explores why apparently similar patterns of daily living can lead to larger and smaller environmental impacts. The contributors describe daily life in many different places in the world and then calculate the environmental impact of these ways of living from the perspective of ecological and carbon footprints. This leads to comparison and discussion of what living within the limits of the planet might mean. Current footprints for countries are derived from national statistics and these hide the variety of impacts made by individual people and the choices they make in their daily lives. This book takes a bottom up approach by calculating the footprints of daily living. The purpose is to show that small changes in behaviour now could avoid some very challenging problems in the future. Offering a global perspective on the question of sustainable living this book will be of great interest to anyone with a concern for the future as well as students and researchers in environmental studies, human geography and development studies.
