Disclosure Within HIV-Affected Families Grace Gachanja, Gary J. Burkholder, Aimee Ferraro, 2018-08-29 While HIV AIDS is a global public health challenge its impact is arguably greatest in the Sub Saharan Africa SSA where new infections account for approximately 66% of the total number of HIV positive persons globally In SSA medical social and economic resources are limited thus necessitating innovative approaches to disease prevention One of the mechanisms of prevention that is most promising occurs through HIV disclosure to family members e g adult sexual partners generally and to children in particular Our emphasis in this eBook is on HIV disclosure to children because it has multiple benefits including improved adherence to antiretroviral medication treatment and understanding at an early age of the impact of sexual activity on the spread of HIV While there is a noticeable gap in research on HIV disclosure to younger children some of the general reasons for non disclosure include concerns about fear of adult partners leaving relationships and that children are too young to comprehend the severity of the situation and may tell others outside the family Thus it is critical to better understand how the HIV disclosure process happens or does not happen within HIV affected families as well as the best practices on how to disclose In this eBook we present a combination of empirical research studies and critical literature reviews that investigate the reasons for and for not disclosing HIV status within HIV affected families and provide evidence based practices that could be adopted by healthcare professionals to help HIV positive parents facilitate disclosure activities within these families This information can also be used by researchers practitioners and stakeholders who are in a position to influence policies on effective HIV disclosure practices guidelines and programs

HIV/AIDS and Its Impact on the Family in Kenya, 2004

Family and HIV Today Robert Bor, 1998-08-01 AIDS is not solely a medical issue but also has profound implications for social and family relationships Traditionally when a person is ill the family is seen to provide emotional practical and social support Experience has shown however that AIDS disrupts this conventional pattern of support On the one hand AIDS like any other serious illness affects family members both from day to day and in the long term What distinguishes AIDS from so many other illnesses is the associated social stigma and the fact that HIV may be transmissible or may have been transmitted within a relationship. Most psychological and social research has concentrated on the impact of AIDS on individuals. Only recently has attention turned to the effect of AIDS on the family. This is the first book to address AIDS in the family and draws on the work of experienced researchers and practitioners from around the world. It is most fitting that the book should first be published in 1994, the United Nations International Year of the Family. Recognizing the role of the family may mark a change in emphasis in future social research and policy in relation to HIV and AIDS. AIDS Bibliography, 1994-11

Family Scripts Joan D. Atwood, 1996. This book is appropriate as a text for postgraduate marriage and family counselor therapist training and also as a professional development resource for practicing marriage and family counselors. The first three chapters of this book introduce the notions of social construction assumptions and social scripting theory. The remaining chapters then apply the theory of scripting to common clinical family situations seen in therapy such as death and grief in the family, premarital child bearing, adolescence, couples therapy, and chemical dependence in the family. Global Perspectives on Family Life Education Mihaela Robila, Alan C.
