

A319 / 320 / 321 ACM

track. The FMGC then commands the autopilot and autothrust to properly maintain the computed track and path.

If the pilot wishes to make changes or revisions to the flight plan then it is done to the FMGC which then recalculates the needed information. For example, if the pilot wishes to change the flight plan route to go direct to a new fix, the new fix is typed into the MCDU and entered into the DRR page. The FMGC now computes the new course and commands the autopilot to turn to the new heading.

"Computer Guided"

Pilot
FMGC
Autopilot	Autothrust
Flight Controls	Thrust

Each higher level uses all the previous levels. In other words computer guided flight is also using the autoflight and manual levels. The pilot can always "drop down" from one level to a lower level by disengaging the appropriate equipment. For example, the pilot may be climbing under computer control in Managed Climb. By selecting a vertical speed of 1500 fpm on the FCU the pilot has now put the vertical path in autopilot control. The FMGC is not controlling the climb rate. If the pilot then disengages the autopilot the aircraft is now under manual control and the pilot is now manually controlling the climb rate.

Two things that should be pointed out. You can have various levels of control at one time. For example, the track may be computer guided by the FMGC while the vertical path is under autopilot control. Another example is when the pilot is hand flying but using autothrust (which is very common). In this case the flight controls are in manual but the thrust is in autoflight.

The other thing to point out is that when hand flying the pilot may use the Flight Director so that while the aircraft is under manual control the pilot is still getting autoflight or computer guided assistance.

Autopilot (PH 14.1.6)

There are two autopilots installed. Normally you will only use one autopilot at a time (Capt. using A/P 1 and F/O using A/P 2). However, for every ILS approach you will engage both autopilots (except, of course, when the second is inop.).

The autopilot can be controlled either directly from the FCU (Flight Control Unit) or through the MCDU and the FMGC. In both cases you must monitor engagement status on the FMA. The FCU has four places to make inputs, Speed, Heading/H&V, Altitude and Altitude Hold/Vertical Speed. In each case the knob for the selection can be pressed or pulled. Pressing the knob will tell the autopilot to use the FMGC for guidance. Pulling the knob will tell the autopilot to use a pilot selected value.
