The Internet Trap Matthew Hindman, 2018-09-25 A book that challenges everything you thought you knew about the online economy The internet was supposed to fragment audiences and make media monopolies impossible Instead behemoths like Google and Facebook now dominate the time we spend online and grab all the profits from the attention economy The Internet Trap explains how this happened This provocative and timely book sheds light on the stunning rise of the digital giants and the online struggles of nearly everyone else and reveals what small players can do to survive in a game that is rigged against them Matthew Hindman shows how seemingly tiny advantages in attracting users can snowball over time The internet has not reduced the cost of reaching audiences it has merely shifted who pays and how Challenging some of the most enduring myths of digital life Hindman explains why the internet is not the postindustrial technology that has been sold to the public how it has become mathematically impossible for grad students in a garage to beat Google and why net neutrality alone is no guarantee of an open internet He also explains why the challenges for local digital news outlets and other small players are worse than they appear and demonstrates what it really takes to grow a digital audience and stay alive in today s online economy The Internet Trap shows why even on the internet there is still no such thing as a free audience

After more than a decade of construction, Ethiopia is filling the Grand Ethiopian Renaissance Dam (GERD), a controversial dam with the potential to transform the hydrology and politics of the Nile Basin. The GERD is the culmination of a dam building boom carried out over three decades and a key pillar of the Ethiopian Peoples Revolutionary Democratic Front's (EPRDF) efforts to bring about an Ethiopian Renaissance. Dams, Power and the Politics of Ethiopia's Renaissance provides a detailed examination of the domestic and international political dynamics that shaped Ethiopia's dam building, drawing on extensive primary research including more than a hundred interviews with politicians, technocrats, consultants, and donors. The authors reflect on the implications of Ethiopia's dam building for broader debates about the role of the state in late development, the dynamics of twenty-first century dam building, and the political economy of renewable energy transitions. A central argument of the book is that Ethiopia's dam building is symbolic of the successes and failures of the EPRDF's developmental state. On the one hand, this dam boom enhanced electricity generation capacity while constituting a key element of the state infrastructure investment that turned Ethiopia into one of the world's fastest growing economies. In contrast, a politically driven decision-making process undermined electricity planning, contributed to an unsustainable debt burden, and ultimately failed to provide reliable electricity access to key users. Following the EPRDF's collapse, the subsequent Prosperity Party government has taken steps away from the state-led development model of its predecessor while labouring towards the final completion of the GERD.

Oxford Studies in African Politics and International Relations is a series for scholars and students working on African politics and International Relations and related disciplines. Volumes concentrate on contemporary developments in African political science, political economy, and International Relations, such as electoral politics, democratization, decentralization, gender, and political representation; the political impact of natural resources; the dynamics and consequences of conflict; comparative political thought; and the nature of the continent's engagement with the East and West. Comparative and mixed methods work is particularly encouraged. Case studies are welcomed but should demonstrate the broader theoretical and empirical implications of the study and its wider relevance to contemporary debates. The focus of the series is on sub-Saharan Africa, although proposals that explain how the region engages with North Africa and other parts of the world are of interest.

Series Editors: Nic Cheeseman (University of Birmingham), Peace Medie (University of Bristol), and Ricardo Soares de Oliveira (University of Oxford).
