Climate-Smart and Resilient Food Systems and Security

Mohamed Behnassi, Abdulmalek A. Al-Shaikh, Riaz Hussain Qureshi, Mirza Barjees Baig, Turki Khalufa A. Faraj, 2024-09-17

This contributed book as a part of a series of CERES publications contributes to the scientific debate about the interlinkages between climate change environment and food systems. It highlights the opportunities to accelerate the transformation of such systems within the perspective of sustainable inclusive and climate smart practices. Most chapters are based on empirical research particularly done in vulnerable and resource constrained countries from the Global South such as India, Kenya, Pakistan, South Asia, Sri Lanka, and Vietnam, and provide policy oriented inputs and recommendations to guide change processes at multiple scales. This project has implications for research innovation and policy design.

Recent Advancements in Smart Remote Patient Monitoring, Wearable Devices, and Diagnostics Systems Zeshan, Furkh, Ahmad, Adnan, 2023-01-13

Different healthcare technologies have been in use for decades. These technologies are continuously evolving and changing the way medicine will be practiced in the future. These technologies allow medical practice from anywhere at any time and from any device. These technologies are mainly concerned with the resources, devices, and methods required to optimize the acquisition, storage, retrieval, processing, and use of information in health. Recent Advancements in Smart Remote Patient Monitoring, Wearable Devices, and Diagnostics Systems provides relevant theoretical and practical frameworks as well as the latest empirical research findings in the area. It provides insights and supports executives concerned with remote patient monitoring through wearable devices and diagnostics systems. Covering topics such as cloud computing, obesity monitoring systems, and photoacoustic imaging, this premier reference source is an essential resource for hospital administrators, medical technicians, healthcare professionals, medical students, and educators, librarians, researchers, and academicians.

Breneman, Paul J. Yakoboski, 2011-01-01

In an era of sound bites Smart Leadership for Higher Education in Difficult Times provides an outstanding analysis of the context in which today's colleges and universities operate. The essays are thought provoking, insightful, and valuable for preparing our institutions for an uncertain future. Through case studies and personal experience, contributors challenge readers to reflect on our own institutions and re-imagine higher education. Graham B. Spanier, The Pennsylvania State University, US.

Smart Leadership for Higher Education in Difficult Times makes the case that bridging the time from recession to recovery with typical belt tightening tactics without a strategy for fundamental change in the higher education business model is a formula for failure. Globalization, changing demographics, evolving technology, and jobs of the future are only beginning to impact the business of higher education. These trends combined with the lingering effects of constrained revenue are the building blocks of a new business environment. Reading this book will jump start your thinking about how innovation, reorganization, prioritization, and strategic investing are necessary for institutional success. John Walda, National Association of College and University Business Officers, US.

In response to falling state support, limited returns from endowments, and increasing costs, colleges and universities have turned to examinations of the mission of higher education and new ways in which its missions can be achieved. Two of the many provocative insights described in this series of papers concern the permanent nature of change in the economic, demographic, and competitive environment and the need for more creativity and innovation. Risa Palm, Georgia State University, US.

Smart Leadership for Higher Education in Difficult Times offers positive ideas and encouragement from some of the leading thinkers and doers in higher education about how to lead proactively in response to the sobering challenges now facing colleges and universities: economic stagnation, the completion imperative, rapid demographic changes, global competition, the stunning pace of technological change, and the tensions among affordability and the stubborn growth in college unit costs. William Zumeta, University of Washington and Association for the Study of Higher Education, US.

As the US economy emerges from the severest recession in a generation, large questions regarding its long-term ramifications for higher education remain unanswered. In fact, the harshest effects of the economic downturn are likely ahead as campus leadership focuses on enrollment, affordability, and fundraising. This volume of essays examines the challenges and opportunities for advancing higher education's core missions of education, research, and service in a resource-constrained environment. Many parties will wish to return to the old normal, but fulfilling the mission of higher education will require implementing change in the face of opposition, gaining support from key stakeholders, and maintaining morale in the process. The new normal entails innovating to meet the needs for higher education among a growing population of potential students from disadvantaged socioeconomic backgrounds, many of whom are ill prepared for a college education and unaware of how to access it, and a population of mid-career students seeking to retool or reinvent themselves for the labor market. The economic success of both individuals and the US economy are directly dependent upon increasing the share of the population receiving a higher education. Chapter authors include college and university presidents and chancellors and other senior administrators and thought leaders from the higher education community They provide new and actionable information to enhance decision making and inform strategic planning as well as a contemporary examination of the business of higher education and areas of potential new research
