I Was Blind But Now I Can See Vendon Wright,2005-10-10 When I was six years old I started wearing glasses to correct my short sight My perception of my low vision changed when I was twenty years old and found out that my brother had suddenly gone blind He was told that he was suffering from Retinitis Pigmentosa RP a disorder that slowly destroys the pigment cells in the eyes There are three different strains of RP and the one my brother has runs in the male line of a family So far there are no known cures My brother s eyes deteriorated quickly which confused us all I soon became curious and convinced myself to attend an eye appointment to determine whether there was more wrong with my eyes than just being short sighted At the age of twenty one I was also diagnosed with RP Since then

I have been slowly going blind not knowing when my world would finally fade away forever Finally at the age of twenty eight I was also registered blind Then to everyone s surprise my sister was registered blind two years later Despite the problems it has caused me I have managed to keep a positive attitude towards life I hold a 4th degree black belt in Taekwondo and I was the first registered blind person in England to achieve this level of excellence After studying Taekwondo for over twenty years I now teach many classes of my own At present I have twenty Black Belts The inspiration to write a book came from persistently helping my friends with their problems Now I would like to help other people by passing on my strengths The story of my life could be used as a motivational tool for other people as it shows how to cope with a wide range of emotions There are many visually impaired people who could benefit The positive thinking market could also find my book useful as it shows a positive way of coping with the challenges of life
