Caryl Churchill's "Top Girls" - feminism vs. culture Alisa Westermann, 2011-06-09 Seminar paper from the year 2010 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Culture and Applied Geography grade 1.7 University of Münster Englisches Seminar course From Page to Stage language English abstract Caryl Churchill's play Top Girls particularly its first act centers on various women from history fiction art and mythology who gather in a restaurant to celebrate the promotion of Marlene the protagonist of the play Above all this dinner scene is marked by a lack of understanding between the characters and the inability of each one to change into the others perspective The juxtaposition of the figures finally ends up in a collapse of the conversation and a monologisation of their dialogues This lack of understanding is based on the different cultural backgrounds of each character Everyone is part of a different society that is based on different norms and values which eliminates the possibility of a change of the character's perspective The question my term paper is based on is how far feminist criticism is valid regarding the tension between culture and feminism In this respect it is necessary to examine the cultural backgrounds and the respective existence of a feminist's movement in the cultures of the characters A valid feministic judgement on the characters can only be given when they are analysed in the light of their culture and afterwards opposed to each other Therefore the literature I took into account focuses on historical information of the characters' cultures especially women's cultural history Furthermore I analysed literature on Caryl Churchill as well as women dramatists in Britain and the feministic movement I examined how far each woman of the dinner scene can be valued as a feminist or as having a feministic attitude and often this feministic attitude is not a general characteristic but rather a characteristic which is connected to a certain domain of their culture Hence I extracted three areas in which this tension between the characters' cultures and their feministic attitude are surfaced their relation to men their family and domestic life and their working life Yet instead of examining each character in each category I concentrated on those characters that stood out in their behaviour and opposed them to each other

Telling Histories, 2022-06-08 The proliferation of historical novels with more or less overt metafictional traits in the late seventies and eighties in Britain is a particularly arresting phenomenon at a time when historians are openly questioning the validity of the traditional concept of history understood as a scientific search for knowledge This apparent contradiction justifies the attempt made by the contributors of this volume to analyze the relationship between history and literature in English The reader will find four preliminary essays on The End of the Classical Period establishing the characteristics of the appropriation of history since the appearance of Sir Walter Scott's historical romances with special emphasis on the Victorian novel Dickens Eliot Mrs Humphry Ward the Irish ballad and Post Independence Indian historical fiction as a necessary preface to the main group of essays on The Postmodernist Era devoted to establishing the common as well as the individually distinctive traits in the writings of some of the most accomplished contemporary writers in English the more centered British novelists Margaret Drabble Julian Barnes and William Golding as well as the more ex centric Angela Carter Salman Rushdie and Jeanette Winterson plus the playwright Caryl Churchill and the black American novelist David Bradley Drama and the Postmodern , Top Girls Caryl Churchill,2011
