Theories and Practices of Development Katie Willis, 2011-02-25 Global economic crisis and the implications of global environmental change have led academics and policy makers to consider how development in all parts of the world should be achieved However development has always been a contested idea While often presented as a positive process to improve people's lives the potential negative dimensions of development on people and environments must also be recognized Theories and Practices of Development provides a clear and user friendly introduction to the complex debates around how development has been understood and achieved The second edition has been fully updated and expanded to reflect global political and economic shifts as well as new approaches to development The rise of China and India is given particular attention as is the global economic crisis and its implications for development theories and practice There are new sections on faith based development and the development dimensions of climate change as well as greater engagement with development theories as they are put into practice in the Global North The book deals with the evolution of development ideas and policies focusing on economic political social environmental and spatial dimensions It highlights how development cannot be considered as a neutral concept but is entwined with inequalities in power at local as well as national and global scales The use of boxed examples tables and illustrations helps students understand complex theoretical ideas and also demonstrates how development theories are put into practice in the real world Each chapter ends with a summary section discussion topics suggestions for further reading and website resources

Genocide, Ethnonationalism, and the United Nations Hannibal Travis, 2013 Genocide Ethnonationalism and the United Nations examines a series of related crises in human civilization growing out of conflicts between powerful states or empires and indigenous or stateless peoples This is the first book to attempt to explore the causes of genocide and other mass killing by a detailed exploration of UN archives covering the period spanning from 1945 through 2011 Hannibal Travis argues that large states and empires disproportionately committed or facilitated genocide and other mass killings between 1945 and 2011 His research incorporates data concerning factors linked to the scale of mass killing and recent findings in human rights political science and legal theory Turning to potential solutions he argues that the concept of genocide imagines a future system of global governance under which the nation state itself is made subject to law The United Nations however has deflected the possibility of such a cosmopolitical law It selectively condemns genocide and has established an institutional structure that denies most peoples subjected to genocide of a realistic possibility of global justice lacks a robust international criminal tribunal or UN army and even encourages security cooperation among states that have proven to be destructive of peoples in the past Questions raised include What have been the causes of mass killing during the period since the United Nations Charter entered into force in 1945 How does mass killing spread across international borders and what is the role of resource wealth the arms trade and external interference in this process Have the United Nations or the International Criminal Court faced up to the problem of genocide and other forms of mass killing as is their mandate
