Beyond the simple contrastive analysis: Appropriate experimental approaches for unraveling the neural basis of conscious experience Jaan Aru, Talis Bachmann, 2015-06-26

Contrasting conditions with and without conscious experience has served consciousness research well However research based on this simple contrast has led to controversies about the neural basis of conscious experience One key reason for these ongoing debates seems to be that the simple contrast between conditions with and without consciousness is not specific for unraveling the neural basis of conscious experience but rather also leads to other processes that precede or follow it Acknowledging this methodological problem implies that some of the previous research findings about the neural underpinnings of conscious experience are actually reflecting the prerequisites and consequences rather than the direct correlates of conscious perception Thus it is required to re evaluate the previous results to find out which of them are telling us anything about the neural basis of consciousness But first and foremost to overcome this methodological problem we need new experimental paradigms that go beyond the simple contrastive analysis or find the ways how some older but well forgotten paradigms may foster a new look at this emerging problem Accordingly this research topic is looking for empirical and theoretical contributions that 1 envision new and suitable experimental approaches to study consciousness that are free from the limitations of the simple contrastive analysis 2 provide empirical data that help to separate the neural correlates of conscious experience from the prerequisites and consequences of it 3 help to re assess previous research findings about the neural correlates of conscious perception in the light of the methodological problems with the traditional contrastive analysis We hope that the theoretical insights and experimental approaches collected within this Research Topic help us to gain a more refined understanding of the neural basis of conscious experience

Borders and Border Crossings in the Contemporary British Short Story Barbara Korte, Laura Ma Lojo-Rodríguez, 2020-01-02 This book represents a contribution to both border studies and short story studies In today's world there is ample evidence of the return of borders worldwide as material reality as a concept and as a way of thinking This collection of critical essays focuses on the ways in which the contemporary British short story mirrors questions and engages with border issues in national and individual life At the same time the concept of the border as well as neighbouring notions of liminality and intersectionality is used to illuminate the short story's unique aesthetic potential The first section Geopolitics and Grievable Lives includes chapters that address the various ways in which contemporary stories engage with our newly bordered world and borders within contemporary Britain The second section examines how British short stories engage with Ethnicity and Liminal Identities while the third Animal Encounters and Metamorphic Bodies focuses on stories concerned with epistemological borders and borderlands of existence and identity Taken together the chapters in this volume demonstrate the varied and complex ways in which British short stories in the twenty first century engage with the concept of the border
