

The problem is: The vehicle's front windshield wipers do not function in any wiper switch position. A scan tool is used to communicate with the front wiper control module while the wiper switch was moved through each position. Each position was confirmed by the data displayed on the scan tool. How would you specifically isolate and check the front wiper motor for correct function? If the motor is found to be good, what are three possible circuit faults that would cause this condition and how would you test the circuit to confirm each of them?
