

Causes of World War I

Historical Context:

At the turn of the nineteenth century, Europe seemed to enjoy a period of peace and progress. Yet below the surface, several forces were at work that subverted Europe into the "powder keg" of World War I. These forces were nationalism, and in fact an explosion effected by the Balkans that, historians used only one of the early causes of World War I. Historians used generalizations from international relations of World War I and Germany to describe the responsibility for it. Which were the causes of World War I?

• Directions: The following questions is based on the accompanying documents in Part II. As you analyze the documents, take into account both the content of the documents and the context in which it was written for:

1. Carefully read the document-based questions. Consider what you already know about this topic.

Have you read your answer the questions if you had no documents to read? If not, read each document carefully, underlining key phrases and words that indicate the document-based questions. Take notes about what you see that might be useful to help answer the question.

Each question is worth 100 points each document. 1. Based on your own knowledge and on the information found in the documents, formulate a thesis that directly answers the question. 2. Organize supporting and relevant information from at least 2-3 documents. 3. Write a well-organized essay presenting your thesis. The essay should be logically presented and
