Climate Change

The weather of a place changes very frequently. The climate in an area takes a long time to change. Climate is the average weather condition of a specific place over a very long period of time. Climate does not change day-to-day. It usually takes hundreds or thousands of years to change.

The climate in one place on Earth is different from another place. For example, it's usually hot and dry in desert, but mountain areas are cold throughout the year. Today we hear about climate change very often. It usually refers to global warming. Due to human activities the average temperature of planet Earth is rising.

Rise in planet's temperature is causing many problems. Melting of polar ice caps, desertification and heat waves are just a few examples. Change in temperature leads to imbalance in many environmental processes. Unusual rain and other season changes destroy agriculture.

The atmosphere of earth is made up of many gases. Some of those gases act as a greenhouse. Gases like water vapor, carbon dioxide and methane trap the incoming sunlight. Due to this the temperature rises. This process is called greenhouse effect. It's helpful for life on this planet. Because without these greenhouse gases, our earth would freeze every night and no life would be possible. The problem arises when the amount of these gases rises too much.

Humans depend on fossil fuels to generate electricity. But burning of fossil fuels releases lots of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere. Farming also contributes to greenhouse effect. Did you know that methane gas is released when a cow farts! There are over a billion cows releasing methane gas daily. Carbon dioxide is absorbed by plants. But due to deforestation number of trees is decreasing and hence carbon
