Your Amazing Digestive System

What happens to your food after you swallow it? Your body has a special system that works hard to break down everything you eat into smaller parts to grow, and repair.

Mouth and Esophagus

Your teeth tear and grind the food, while saliva (spit) starts to break it down. Your tongue pushes the food to the back of your mouth, where you swallow it.

The esophagus, a long, muscular tube that connects your mouth to your stomach, squeezes and pushes the food down in a process called peristalsis.

In the stomach, it gets mixed with strong acids and enzymes that break it down. The stomach turns food into a thick, soupy mixture called chyme. Your body's just prepared for the next step.

What Happens

In the small intestine, a long, winding tube that's about 20 feet long! This is where most of the food gets absorbed into your bloodstream. Your liver and pancreas that break food down into pieces.

After the small intestine, there, water is removed from the waste. Finally, the waste is stored in the rectum until it leaves your body.

When you're asleep, it keeps your body working. To keep your digestive system healthy.

If your body can use the food you eat, you'll grow and stay healthy.
