

BIOSPHERE 2

On Sunday September 26th, 1993, four men and four women, ranging in age from 29 to 69, came back to earth from another planet. Yet that another planet, called Biosphere 2, had never been separated by more than one inch (2.5 cm) from the Arizona desert north of Tucson.

For exactly two years the eight, all experts in different scientific fields, lived together in a completely closed environment. This unique environment had its own atmosphere, as well as its own desert, ocean, river, marshes, fields and mountains, even its own rainforest. The eight grew their own food and controlled all aspects of their lives.

The aim of this experiment was to understand certain aspects of the world's ecology, and furthermore, to offer a model for colonies in space in the future. Initially the experiment was very controversial in scientific circles though later it was accepted that the ecological work was in a closed environment could be very valuable.

And the effects on the scientists? Life in Biosphere 2 was not easy, as they only managed to produce 1,800 calories in food per person each day - a lot less than the expected 2,600 calories. As a result, at the end of the experiment all eight were much thinner than at the start. But all of them thought that being thinner was better, and they also cited other benefits, claiming that they were 'fitter, calmer, more tolerant, and less frenetic, in addition to being slower-paced, better listeners and better eaters'.

All eight were single and consequently the media immediately wanted to know what had happened on the emotional front. However, the eight, at least at the beginning were not telling!
