Marine biomolecules Antonio Trincone, Mikhail Kusaykin, Svetlana Ermakova, 2015-10-02 Oceans include the greatest extremes of pressure temperature and light and habitats can range from tropical waters to ocean trenches several kilometers below sea level at high pressure With its 70% of the surface of our planet marine ecosystem still remains largely unexplored understudied and underexploited in comparison with terrestrial ecosystems organisms and bioprocesses The biological adaptation of marine organisms to a wide range of environmental conditions in the specific environment temperature salinity tides pressure radiation light etc has made them an enormous reservoir of interesting biological material for both basic research and biotechnological improvements As a consequence marine ecosystem is valued as a source of enzymes and other biomolecules exhibiting new functions and activities to fulfill human needs Indeed in recent years it has been recognised as an untapped source of novel enzymes and metabolites even though with regard to the assignment of precise biological functions to genes proteins and enzymes it is still considered as the least developed Using metagenomics to recover genetic material directly from environmental samples this biogenetic diversification can be accessed but despite the contributions from metagenomic technologies the new field requires major improvements A few words on the complexity of marine environments should be added here This complexity ranges from symbiotic relationships to biology and chemistry of defence mechanisms and from chemocology of marine invasions up to the strategies found in prokaryotes to adapt to extreme environments The interdisciplinary study of this complexity will enable researchers to find an arsenal of enzymes and pathways greatly demanded in biotechnological applications As far as marine enzymes are concerned they may carry novel chemical and stereochemical properties thus biocatalytically oriented studies testing of suitable substrates appropriate checking of reaction conditions study of stereochemical aspect of catalysis should be performed to appropriately reveal this chemical biodiversity which increases interest for these enzymes Among other biomolecules polysaccharides are the most abundant renewable biomaterial found on land and in oceans Their molecular diversity is very interesting except polysaccharides used traditionally in food and non food industries the structure and the functionality of most of them are unknown and unexplored Brown seaweeds synthesize unique bioactive polysaccharides laminarans alginic acids and fucoidans A wide range of biological activities anticoagulant antitumor antiviral anti inflammation etc have been attributed to fucoidans and their role with respect to structure activity relationship is still under debate In this Research Topic we wish to centralize and review contributions idea and comments related to the issues above In particular results of enzymatic bioprospecting in gross marine environment will be acknowledged along with research for structural characterization and biological function of biomolecules such as marine polysaccharides and all kind of research related to the complexity of bioprocesses in marine environments Inter and multi disciplinary approach to this field is favoured in this Research Topic and could greatly be facilitated by the web and open access nature as well Make: Technology on Your Time Volume 26

Mercury in the Environment Michael S. Bank,2012-05-31 Mercury deposition and contamination is widespread and well documented and it continues to be a public health concern for certain sectors of the global human population in both developed and developing countries This edited volume focuses on integrating the diverse sciences involved in the process of mercury cycling in the environment from the atmosphere through terrestrial and aquatic food webs and human populations to develop a comprehensive perspective on this important environmental pollutant Using a systems level approach this book provides recommendations on mercury remediation risk communication education and monitoring In response to a growing need for understanding the cycling of this ubiquitous pollutant the science of mercury has grown rapidly expanding into several interdisciplinary fields and encompassing such disparate academic and scientific disciplines as biogeochemistry economics sociology public health decision sciences physics global change and mathematics Only recently have scientists really begun to establish more holistic approaches to studying mercury pollution giving rise to investigations that have furthered the integration of a multi tiered approach especially by using chemistry biology and human health sciences collectively The study of mercury pollution has produced a variety of contributions to domestic and international policies related to the management of mercury in the environment Provided by publisher Federal Register ,2004-08

Wilson, 2021-05-31 In Turbulent Streams: An Environmental History of Japan's Rivers 1600-1930 Roderick I. Wilson describes how the rivers of Japan are both hydrologically and historically dynamic. Today these waterways are slowed, channeled, diverted, and dammed by a myriad of levees, multiton concrete tetrapods, and massive multipurpose dams. In part, this intensive engineering arises from the waterways falling great elevations over short distances, flowing over unstable rock and soil, and receiving large quantities of precipitation during monsoons and typhoons. But this modern river regime is also the product of a history that narrowed both these waterways and people's diverse interactions with them in the name of flood control. Neither a story of technological progress nor environmental decline, this history introduces the concept of environmental relations as a category of historical analysis both to explore these fluvial interactions and reveal underappreciated dimensions of Japanese history. F & S Index United States Annual, 2007
