Global Production Networking and Technological Change in East Asia Shahid Yusuf,M. Anjum Altaf,Kaoru Nabeshima,2004-07-01 In the coming decades East Asian economies must face the challenges of an increasingly globalized marketplace This book explores the changing parameters of competition in East Asia and argues that success ultimately will depend on the ability of the region's firms to harness the potential of global production networks and to build their own innovative capability. Presenting the latest findings on global production networks and the evolution of technological capabilities, it provides researchers, students and policymakers with in-depth information and analysis on key issues related to growth and development in East Asia. East Asian firms must not only achieve greater efficiency but also become more innovative, offering differentiated products in order to vie with other first-tier suppliers of multinational corporations. These firms will also need to develop a technological edge if they are to compete with corporations from the leading OECD countries and form their own global production networks.

Global Production Networking and Technological Change in East Asia argues that a development strategy linked to technological advance will be necessary to foster the growth of innovative national firms that can remain competitive in global markets. Multinationals and Economic Growth in East Asia Shujiro Urata, Chia Siow Yue, Fukunari Kimura, 2006-11-22. This is a comprehensive examination of the role of foreign direct investment in East Asia before and after the financial crisis of mid 1997. An Introduction to International Economics Kenneth A. Reinert, 2020-08-27. Ideal for a one-semester course in international economics, this book is accessible to those within and outside of economics programs. Vietnam Economic News, 2009. Rent Seeking and Development Christine Ngoc Ngo, 2020-03-25. Rent seeking continues to be a topic of much discussion and debate within the political economy. This new study challenges previous assumptions and sets out a new analysis of the dynamics of rent and rent seeking in development, using Vietnam as a case study. This book provides an alternative approach to the study of economic development and illuminates new perspectives in a contemporary context. It argues that not only has there been an incomplete understanding of Vietnam's industrial development over the last three decades but that neoclassical economics do not adequately address many of the issues endangering Vietnam's development. A significant observation of the Vietnamese experience is the analytical view that rents can be developmental and growth enhancing if the configuration of rent management incentivizes industrial upgrade and conditions firm performance. Underlining the need to reexamine how economic actors and the state collaborate through formal and informal institutions, this study fills a gap in the scholarship of the political economy of rent and rent seeking and how rents might be used for developmental purposes. Exploiting Linkages for Building Technological Capabilities Mai Fujita, 2014-01-10. One of the key ingredients of success in building internationally competitive industries lies in amassing a sizeable pool of competent suppliers of parts, components and accessories. This monograph examines how, in developing countries, suppliers of mechanical components at the low end of the technological trajectory build up key capabilities over time. The focus is on Vietnam's motorcycle industry, which was rapidly transformed from a small, highly protected market to the world's fourth largest motorcycle producer. This rare success resulted from intense competition between leading Japanese motorcycle manufacturers and local Vietnamese assemblers of imported Chinese components, both attempting to gain supremacy in the emerging market. In particular, the book analyzes how local Vietnamese suppliers of motorcycle components exploited participation in contrasting types of value chains developed by the two groups of leading manufacturing firms referred to here as Japanese and or Vietnamese Chinese chains for accumulating strategic know how On the basis of historical evidence and recent empirical data collected through repeated rounds of in depth fieldwork the analysis finds first those suppliers learning trajectories evolved over time resulting in a divergence in learning performance extending across suppliers in later phases of industrial development In the later stage high performing suppliers amassed basic innovative expertise constituting the bedrock of this fast growing industry Second the analysis finds that the diverging performance can be explained by the combination of roles played by lead firms in inducing and facilitating supplier learning and those of suppliers in mobilizing their own sources of knowledge These conclusions not only provide dynamic insightful accounts of supplier learning in developing country contexts but also make key theoretical and methodological contributions to the research on value chain participation and supplier learning
