Underlying Cancer Osbaldo Resendis-Antonio,Christian Diener,2017-11-23 Since the discovery of the Warburg effect in the 1920s cancer has been tightly associated with the genetic and metabolic state of the cell One of the hallmarks of cancer is the alteration of the cellular metabolism in order to promote proliferation and undermine cellular defense mechanisms such as apoptosis or detection by the immune system However the strategies by which this is achieved in different cancers and sometimes even in different patients of the same cancer is very heterogeneous which hinders the design of general treatment options Recently there has been an ongoing effort to study this phenomenon on a genomic scale in order to understand the causality underlying the disease Hence current omics technologies have contributed to identify and monitor different biological pieces at different biological levels such as genes proteins or metabolites These technological capacities have provided us with vast amounts of clinical data where a single patient may often give rise to various tissue samples each of them being characterized in detail by genomescale data on the sequence expression proteome and metabolome level Data with such detail poses the imminent problem of extracting meaningful interpretations and translating them into specific treatment options To this purpose Systems Biology provides a set of promising computational tools in order to decipher the mechanisms driving a healthy cell s metabolism into a cancerous one However this enterprise requires bridging the gap between large data resources mathematical analysis and modeling specifically designed to work with the available data This is by no means trivial and requires high levels of communication and adaptation between the experimental and theoretical side of research

Cell Biology and Translational Medicine, Volume 1 Kursad Turksen,2018-08-21 Much research has focused on the basic cellular and molecular biological aspects of stem cells Much of this research has been fueled by their potential for use in regenerative medicine applications which has in turn spurred growing numbers of translational and clinical studies However more work is needed if the potential is to be realized for improvement of the lives and well being of patients with numerous diseases and conditions With a goal to accelerate advances by timely information exchange this new book series Cell Biology and Translational Medicine CBTMED as part of SpringerNature s longstanding and very successful Advances in Experimental Medicine and Biology book series is launched Emerging areas of regenerative medicine and translational aspects of stem cells will be covered in each volume Outstanding researchers are recruited to highlight developments and remaining challenges in both the basic research and clinical arenas This current book is the first volume of a continuing series

Crosstalk between the osteogenic and neurogenic stem cell niches: how far are they from each other? Wanda Lattanzi,Maria Concetta Geloso,2016-03-14 Somatic stem cells reside in definite compartments known as niches within developed organs and tissues being able to renew themselves differentiate and ensure tissue maintenance and repair In contrast with the original dogmatic distinction between renewing and non renewing tissues somatic stem cells have been found in almost every human organism including brain and heart HSCs and mesenchymal stem cells MSCs that intensely interacts HSCs represent the common precursors of all mature blood cells Bone cartilage blood vessels adipose tissue and And in the case of the skeletal muscle Supporting connective stroma Despite this high plasticity the claim that MSCs could be capable of transdifferentiation along non mesodermal lineages including neurons has been strongly argued Adult osteogenic and neurogenic niches display wide differences embryo origin microenvironment progenitors lifespan lineages of supporting cells Although similar pathways may be involved it is hard to believe that the osteogenic and neurogenic lineages can share functional features The outbreak of the disease is the most important cause of neurodegeneration and neurological disorders including the development of neurological disorders Based on this research the research group is interested in the development of new technologies and in the field of research and development The results of the study are summarized in the following sections In vivo transplantation has been covered
