He darted through the orange orchard searching for slugs for his breakfast and between whiles he rocked on the branches and rang over his message of encouragement to men. The song of the Cardinal was overflowing with joy for this was his holiday his playtime. The southern world was filled with brilliant sunshine gaudy flowers an abundance of fruit myriads of insects and never a thing to do except to bathe feast and be happy. No wonder his song was a prophecy of good cheer for the future for happiness made up the whole of his past.

Gene Stratton-Porter Judith Reick Long, 1990. When Gene Stratton Porter died at the age of sixty-one on 6 December 1924, she was one of America's most popular novelists and the best known of the many Indiana authors. At the time of her death, her publishers estimated that she had more than fifty million readers in the United States and many more throughout the world. In the last seventeen years of her life, her books sold at a rate of 1,700 copies a day. Although her novels were not well received by literary critics, the traditional values and reverence for nature that they reflect continue to attract an admiring and responsive audience. Many of her novels have been issued in new editions, and demand among antique collectors for original editions is intense. However, until now, this famous Hoosier has been neglected by biographers. Judith Reick Long and the Indiana Historical Society seek to correct this injustice with Gene Stratton Porter: Novelist and Naturalist, a balanced account of Stratton Porter that shows both her strengths and her weaknesses and offers a few surprises along the way

Seeing Nature Through Gender Virginia Scharff, 2003 Environmental history has traditionally told the story of Man and Nature Scholars have too frequently overlooked the ways in which their predominantly male subjects have themselves been shaped by gender Seeing Nature through Gender here reintroduces gender as a meaningful category of analysis for environmental history showing how women's actions desires and choices have shaped the world and seeing men as gendered actors as well In thirteen essays that show how gendered ideas have shaped the ways in which people have represented experienced and consumed their world Virginia Scharff and her coauthors explore interactions between gender and environment in history Ranging from colonial borderlands to transnational boundaries from mountaintop to marketplace they focus on historical representations of humans and nature on questions about consumption on environmental politics and on the complex reciprocal relations among human bodies and changing landscapes They also challenge the ecofeminist position by challenging the notion that men and women are essentially different creatures with biologically different destinies Each article shows how a person or group of people in history have understood nature in gendered terms and acted accordingly often with dire consequences for other people and organisms Here are considerations of the ways we study sexuality among birds of William Byrd's masking sexual encounters in his account of an eighteenth century expedition of how the ecology of fire in a changing built environment has reshaped firefighters own gendered identities Some are playful as in a piece on the evolution of snow bunnies to shred bunnies Others are dead serious as in a chilling portrait of how endocrine disrupters are reinventing humans animals and water systems
