Connolly,Ernest A. Edmonds,2012-12-06 Computing despite the relative brevity of its history has already evolved into a subject in which a fairly large number of subdisciplines can be identified Moreover there has been a noticeable tendency for the different branches of the subject each to develop its own intellectual culture tradition and momentum This is not of course to suggest that any individual subdiscipline has become a watertight compartment or that developments in one branch of the subject have tended to take place in total isolation from developments in other related areas Nevertheless it does mean that a deliberate effort is required in order to bring different subdisciplines together in a fruitful and beneficial manner Artificial Intelligence AI and Computer Supported Cooperative Work CSCW jointly constitute a good example of two branches of computing that have emerged separately and given rise to largely distinct research communities and initiatives On the one hand the history of AI can be traced back to the 1950s the term Artificial Intelligence being generally attributed to John McCarthy who first used it in print in 1956 Computer Supported Cooperative Work on the other hand is a term of more recent coinage having been devised by Irene Greif and Paul Cashman in 1984 EPA Publications Bibliography Quarterly Abstract Bulletin United States.
