Davis, 2024-08-01 At the heart of process relational theology in the tradition of Alfred North Whitehead 1861 1947 and Charles Hartshorne 1897 2000 is the rejection of coercive omnipotence and the embrace of divine persuasion as the patient and uncontrolling means by which God works with a truly self creative world According to Whitehead Plato's conviction that God is a persuasive agency and not a coercive agency constitutes one of the greatest intellectual discoveries in the history of religion According to Hartshorne omnipotence is a theological mistake What is behind these claims Why do process relational philosophers and theologians reject divine omnipotence How have they justified a commitment to divine persuasion and what kind of theoretical and practical implications are involved Featuring contributions from key process relational thinkers this book situates a shift from force to persuasion across multiple thresholds of discourse from philosophy and theology to spirituality and politics to pluralism axiology and apocalypse It aims to reawaken attention to the operations of divine persuasion as ever loving and inherently noncoercive but always at risk in an open and relational universe At this Time and in this Place David S. Cunningham, 2016 This volume champions vocation and calling as key elements of undergraduate education It offers a historical and theoretical account of vocational reflection and discernment as well as suggesting how these endeavours can be implemented through specific educational practices Against the backdrop of the current national conversation about the purposes of higher education it argues that the undergraduate years can provide a certain amount of relatively unfettered time and a free and ordered space in which students can consider their callings American Book Publishing Record Cumulative, 1950-1977 R.R.
