Discipline Problems

Tadashi Dozono, 2024-05-07 Angel a Black tenth grader at a New York City public school self identifies as a nerd and likes to learn But she s troubled that her history classes leave out events like the genocide and dispossession of Indigenous people in the Americas presenting a sugar coated image of the United States that is at odds with her everyday experience The history I learned in school is simpler she says The world I live in is a lot more complex Angel like every student interviewed in Discipline Problems has been identified by teachers as a troublemaker a student whose behavior disrupts classroom norms and interferes with instruction But her critiques of the curriculum she s taught speak to her curiosity and insight crucial foundations for understanding history Like many students who have been marginalized by systemic racism in American schools she exposes the shortcomings of her classrooms academic environments by challenging both the content and the methods of her education All too often these challenges are framed as troublemaking and the students are disciplined for acting out instead of being rewarded for their intellectual engagement Tadashi Dozono a professor of education and former high school social studies teacher takes seriously the often overlooked critiques that students of color who get labeled as troublemakers direct toward their high school history curriculum He reinterprets troublemaking usually cast as a behavioral deficit as an intellectual asset and form of reasoning that challenges the disciplining reason of classrooms where whiteness is valued over the histories and knowledge of people of color Dozono shows how what are traditionally framed as discipline problems can be seen through a different lens as responses to educational practices that marginalize non white students Discipline Problems reveals how students of color seek out alternate avenues for understanding their world and imagines a pedagogy that champions the curiosity intellect and knowledge of marginalized learners

The Brilliance of Black

Children in Mathematics Jacqueline Leonard, Danny B. Martin, 2013-03-01 This book is a critically important contribution to the work underway to transform schooling for students who have historically been denied access to a quality education specifically African American children The first section of the book provides some historical perspective critical to understanding the current state of education in the U S specifically for the education of African American children The following sections include chapters on policy learning ethnomathematics student identity and teacher preparation as it relates to the mathematical education of Black children Through offering counternarratives about mathematically successful Black youth advocating for a curriculum that is grounded in African American culture and ways of thinking providing shining examples of the brilliance of Blacks students and promoting high expectations for all rather than situating students as the problem the authors of this book provide powerful insights related to the teaching and learning of mathematics for African American students As is made evident in this book effective teaching involves much more than just engaging students in inquiry based pedagogy Kitchen 2003 The chapters offered in this book demonstrate how mathematics instruction for African American students needs to take into account historical marginalization and present day policies that do harm to Black students Kunjufu 2005 Empowering mathematics instruction for African American students needs to take into consideration and promote students cultural spiritual and historical identities Furthermore mathematics instruction for African American students should create opportunities for students to express themselves and the needs of their communities as a means to promote social justice both within their classrooms and communities

Public Education, Neoliberalism, and Teachers Paul Bocking,2020-04-20 From pressure to teach to the test and the use of quantitative metrics to define education quality to the rise of school choice and the shift of principals from colleagues to managers teachers in New York Mexico City and Toronto have experienced strikingly similar challenges to their professional autonomy By visiting schools and meeting teachers government officials and union leaders Paul Bocking identifies commonalities that are shaping how teachers work and public schools function While arguing that neoliberal education policy is a dominant trend transcending the realities of school districts states or national governments Bocking also demonstrates the importance of local context to explain variations in education governance especially when understanding the role of resistance led by teachers unions overrepresented in juvenile and adult criminal justice systems relative to their numbers in the general population Although much existing research blames individual kids for getting arrested school level policies and practices affect a variety of student outcomes including involvement with the justice system These school level policies and practices can and should be altered by teachers administrators and policy makers to reduce the number of young people getting arrested Disabling the School to Prison Pipeline uses administrative data from New York City public schools and interviews with young people who have received special education services in NYC public schools and been arrested to better understand how schools can help or harm students receiving special education services Schools cannot fix all problems associated with the criminal justice system in the United States however we can certainly expect schools not to make existing problems worse This book identifies school level policies and practices that may lead to negative outcomes for students such as getting arrested and suggests alternatives

The College Handbook ,1989

A Chronicle of Echoes Mercedes K. Schneider,2014-04-01

Corporate reform is not reform at all. Instead, it is the systematic destruction of the foundational American institution of public education. The primary motivation behind this destruction is greed. Public education in America is worth almost a trillion dollars a year. Whereas American public education is a democratic institution, its destruction is being choreographed by a few wealthy, well-positioned individuals and organizations. This book investigates and exposes the handful of people and institutions that are often working together to become the driving force behind destroying the community public school.

Cultivating Rural Education Caitlin Howley, Sam Redding, 2021-03-01. Rural life is more complex than it is perhaps credited. This edited volume explores several themes that highlight such complexities, particularly in terms of what they imply for rural teaching and learning. These themes include the geographic, demographic, and socioeconomic diversity within and across rural communities; the notion that rurality is not a deficit but rather a context; and the array of novel and interesting ways to build upon rural assets and overcome challenges so that rural students are not afforded fewer educational opportunities simply by virtue of their zip code. More practically, this book offers counsel for readers who may be interested in learning more about rural circumstances so that they can make informed and responsive decisions about policies and programs targeting rural students, educators, and schools. Praise for Cultivating Rural Education. Making appropriate decisions about policy and practice in rural education settings demands an understanding of rural communities and the nuances of rural lifeways that are not standard fare in most decision makers' professional backgrounds and preparation. This book clearly and insightfully helps guide readers to those understandings, offering a valuable resource both for individuals with nonrural backgrounds as a thorough introduction to the salient contexts of rural education and for those with rural backgrounds as a guide for framing, reframing, and clarifying their existing understandings. Jerry D. Johnson, Professor and Lydia E. Skeen Endowed Chair in Education, Kansas State University. Howley and Redding have co-edited a book that brings to life the complexity of rural people and places and helps readers understand what this complexity means for rural education. The range of voices and research in Cultivating Rural Education demonstrates how varied rural places are, how real the educational challenges rural schools and districts face are, and how much strength and ingenuity rural people bring to the table to address those challenges. Robert Mahaffey, Executive Director, Rural School and Community Trust. The book Cultivating Rural Education gives an actionable planning process to understand, define, and cultivate our rural schools and communities. The community and school are so closely tied together it is time for our stakeholders and community members to highlight what is right and adjust the areas that need adjusting to help save and establish a true path to sustainability for Rural America. Allen Pratt, Executive Director, National Rural Education Association.
