

When disconnecting a connector, be sure to pull onto the connector and the braid.

Disconnect connectors which have cables by pulling on the shield induced by the wires in the connector.

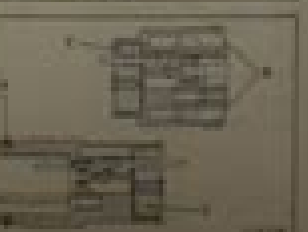

Connect connectors which have cables by inserting the connector into the cable.

When using a sharp object to perform operations on cables, always use a sharp object. Insert the sharp object into the cable.

If the connector is a shield connector, insert the sharp object through the hole in the shield cap for the shield wires, being careful not to damage the insulation of the wires, continue to insert the sharp object until it contacts the terminal.

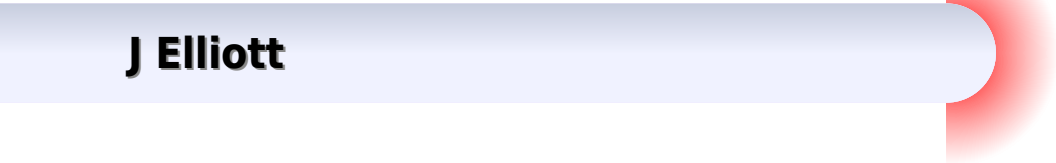

When shield connectors are connected or disconnected, use wires having the following profile:

1. If there are shield, braid, and other conductors on part of shield, shield is allowed to be damaged.
2. If there are shield, braid, and other conductors on shield, shield is allowed to be damaged.
3. Check to ensure that shield (shield) is held securely in the connector housing.
