Wicks, 2000-10-01 Understanding Audiences helps readers to recognize the important role that media plays in their lives and suggests ways in which they may use media constructively. Author Robert H. Wicks considers the relationship between the producers and the receivers of media information focusing on how messages shape perceptions of social reality. He analyzes how contemporary media including newspapers, film, television and the Internet vie for the attention of the audience members and evaluates the importance of message structure and content in attracting and maintaining the attention of audiences. Wicks also examines the principles associated with persuasive communication and the ways in which professional communicators frame messages to help audiences construct meaning about the world around them. Among other features this text describes the processes associated with human information processing; presents an analysis of the principles associated with social learning in children and adults; and explores the possibility that media messages may cultivate ideas, attitudes and criticisms of this perspective. Explains how most media messages are framed to highlight or accentuate specific perspectives of individuals or organizations; challenging the notion of objectivity in media information messages; considers the effects of media exposure such as whether
