ATMOSPHERE, CLIMATE, AND CHANGE

THOMAS E. GRAEDEL
PAUL J. CRUTZEN

Over the last century, human activity has changed the composition of the atmosphere in ways that are significant to future climate. The burning of fossil fuels has released the world of carbon, and the release of the heat-trapping gases, such as carbon dioxide, methane, and nitrous oxide, has led to a warming of the atmosphere. The burning of fossil fuels has also released a host of other pollutants, including sulfur dioxide, which can lead to acid rain. The release of chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) has led to the depletion of the ozone layer, which can lead to an increase in skin cancer and other health problems. The release of greenhouse gases has also led to a warming of the planet, which can lead to a rise in sea levels and other climate-related problems. The book discusses the science of climate change and the impact of human activity on the atmosphere, and it offers a range of solutions to the problem of climate change.
