Literature Circles Darah Grisham,2001 Evidence-Based Practice in Educating Deaf and Hard-of-Hearing Students Patricia Elizabeth Spencer,Marc Marschark,2010-07-21 Too often decisions on how to best support deaf and hard of hearing children in developing language and academic skills are made based on incorrect or incomplete information. No matter how well intentioned decisions grounded in opinions, beliefs, or value judgments are insufficient to guide practice. Instead, we need to take advantage of relevant emerging research concerning best practices and outcomes in educating deaf and hard of hearing learners. Co-authored by two of the most respected leaders in the field, this book summarizes and evaluates research findings across multiple disciplines pertaining to the raising and educating of deaf children, providing a comprehensive but concise record of the successes, failures, and unanswered questions in deaf education. A readily accessible and invaluable source for teachers, university students, and other professionals, Evidence Based Practice in Educating Deaf and Hard of Hearing Students encourages readers to reconsider assumptions and delve more deeply into what we really know about deaf and hard of hearing children, their patterns of development, and their lifelong learning.

Sign Language Interpreting and Interpreter Education Marc Marschark, Rico Peterson, Elizabeth A. Winston, Patricia Sapere, Carol M. Convertino, Rosemarie Seewagen, Christine Monikowski, 2005-04-14. More than 14.6 million people in the United States have hearing losses of sufficient severity to be considered deaf; another 21 million people have other hearing impairments. For many deaf and hard of hearing individuals, sign language and voice interpreting is essential to their participation in educational programs and their access to public and private services. However, there is less than half the number of interpreters needed to meet the demand; interpreting quality is often variable, and there is a considerable lack of knowledge of factors that contribute to successful interpreting. Perhaps it is not surprising, then, that a study by the National Association of the Deaf (NAD) found that 70% of the deaf individuals are dissatisfied with interpreting quality. Because recent legislation in the United States and elsewhere has mandated access to educational, employment, and other contexts for deaf individuals and others with hearing disabilities, there is an increasing need for quality sign language interpreting. It is in education, however, that the need is most pressing, particularly because more than 75% of deaf students now attend regular schools rather than schools for the deaf, where teachers and classmates are unable to sign for themselves. In the more than 100 interpreter training programs in the U.S. alone, there are a variety of educational models, but little empirical information on how to evaluate them or determine their appropriateness in different interpreting and interpreter education contexts, covering what we know, what we do not know, and what we should know. Several volumes have covered interpreting and interpreter education; there are even some published dissertations that have included a single research study, and a few books have attempted to offer methods for professional interpreters or interpreter educators with nods to existing research. This is the first volume that synthesizes existing work and provides a coherent picture of the field as a whole, including evaluation of the extent to which current practices are supported by validating research. It will be the first comprehensive source suitable as both a reference book and a textbook for interpreter training programs and a variety of courses on bilingual education, psycholinguistics, and translation and cross-linguistic studies.
