Power and Principle Joel E. Oestreich, 2007-06-26 The UN Secretary General Kofi Annan has instructed all UN specialized agencies and other affiliated organizations to consider how their work might advance the cause of human rights around the world Many of these bodies have taken this call to heart with a wide range of intergovernmental organizations IGOs trying to play a more active role in promoting human welfare Power and Principle is a comparative study of how and why IGOs integrate human rights standards into their development operations It focuses on the process of policy innovation in three UN related IGOs the UN Children s Fund UNICEF the World Bank and the World Health Organization WHO In his comprehensive analysis Joel E Oestreich uses case studies to demonstrate how their policies have evolved during the past two decades to reflect important human rights considerations Drawing on interviews with dozens of staffers from IGOs Oestreich creates a gripping narrative of the inner workings of these large bureaucracies In each study he describes how the organization first became interested in human rights standards how these standards were adopted as a priority how the organization defined rights in the context of their work and what a rights based approach has meant in practice The book argues that IGOs ought to be seen as capable of meaningful agency in international politics and describes the nature of that agency It concludes with an examination of these organizations and their ethical responsibilities as actors on the world stage

The World Bank Michelle Miller-Adams, 1999-03-25 This book considers the nature of change at the World Bank exploring both the external impetus for change and the impact of the Bank s internal organization and culture The author s findings are supported by detailed case studies of three of the Bank s most important new agendas private sector development participation governance Proliferation of International Organizations Niels M. Blokker, Henry G. Schermers, 2021-11-29

The proliferation of international organizations is presently a hot issue. New international organizations have been created over the last few years such as the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons and the World Trade Organization. At the same time a certain reluctance may be observed to create new organizations. Overlapping activities and conflicting competences occur frequently and the need for coordination is evident. The events in former Yugoslavia are an example. Both during the armed conflicts in Bosnia and Kosovo and afterwards in the era of reconstruction the need to coordinate the work of organizations such as the UN, NATO, the EU, the World Bank, OSCE and the Council of Europe was vital. Against this background a number of legal issues have become more important that have not yet been researched extensively, perhaps the only exception being the proliferation of international tribunals. Questions include the following: Why were new organizations created while others already existed in the same or a related field? What specific legal problems have arisen that are related to the coexistence of different organizations working partly in the same area? What mechanisms or instruments have been developed to coordinate the activities and to solve legal problems? These and other questions were discussed during a conference that took place from 18 to 20 November 1999 in the Academy Building of Leiden University, The Netherlands. A large number of experts, both academics and practitioners, participated. The purpose of this book is to present the issues discussed during the Leiden conference to a larger audience. This book contains the adapted papers for the conference and several other contributions.

Research Handbook on International Environmental Law Malgosia Fitzmaurice, David M. Ong, Panos Merkouris, 2010 an impressive volume and the editors have put together a high quality collection. Research Handbook on International Environmental Law ought to be an invaluable reference source for both teachers and students of international environmental law in the years to come. Web Journal of Current Legal Issues

This wide ranging and comprehensive Handbook examines recent developments in international environmental law (IEL) and the crossover effects of this expansion on other areas of international law such as trade law and the law of the sea. The expert contributors offer analyses of foundational issues in IEL such as responsibility for environmental damage, sustainable development and the precautionary principle alongside studies in topical subject areas including marine protection and the law of international watercourses. This Research Handbook offers an in depth analysis of IEL both as a field of law in its own right and as part of the wider system of international law. It gives a comprehensive view of IEL in all its forms and complexity. With thorough examination of specific environmental regimes and compliance mechanisms this Handbook will be an indispensable resource for legal scholars, students and practitioners alike.

Sustaining Forests World Bank, 2004-05-01 The World Bank's Forests Strategy adopted in October 2002 charts a path for the Bank's proactive engagement in the sector to help attain the goal of poverty reduction without jeopardizing the environmental values intrinsic to sustainability. This strategy replaces the Bank's 1991 Forestry Strategy and was developed on the basis of the findings of an independent review of the 1991 strategy and a two year consultative process with development partners and stakeholders around the world The revised strategy Sustaining Forests is built on three guiding pillars harnessing the potential of forests to reduce poverty integrating forests into sustainable economic development and protecting global forest values Recognizing the key role forests play in contributing to the livelihoods of people living in extreme poverty government and local ownership of forest policies and interventions are emphasized along with the development of appropriate institutions to ensure good governance and the mainstreaming of forests into national development planning The strategy also aims to support ecologically socially and economically sound management of production forests by ensuring good management practices through application of safeguard procedures and independent monitoring and certification Implementation of the strategy will center on building and strengthening partnerships with the private sector non governmental organizations and other donor agencies to promote better forest conservation and management at country and global levels

Accountability of the International Monetary Fund Barry Carin,Angela Wood,2005 Brings together leading experts from all over the world to further the debate on the various dimensions of accountability of IMF to its various shareholders and stakeholders Having fully explored how the notion of accountability can be pragmatically applied it then tests various alternative approaches and makes some recommendations
