

in the conducting of the service. The liturgical color white, symbolizing joy, is the desirable color to be worn and used in the service.

The pastor should be guided in conducting the funeral service by the heritage of the Christian faith — both Scripture and the history of the church — which emphasizes the reality of death and the hope of new life. The minister should take the lead in recapturing these fundamentals and in making use of the rich heritage of the past to create a service that is new and relevant.

An important element of the Christian heritage is the affirmation of belief in the resurrection of the body, in contrast to the Greek idea of the immortality of the soul. The funeral service, and especially the sermon, should hold up the biblical hope of life beyond the grave by the power of God.

Oscar Cullmann has sharply distinguished between immortality of the soul and resurrection of the dead, pointing out that immortality is only a negative assertion: The soul does not die.<sup>1</sup> But the biblical teaching of resurrection positively affirms that the whole person who really died is recalled to life by a new act of God's creation. Study of and reflection upon these two concepts in the light of the teaching of Scripture and their place in church history can enable the minister to plan and conduct the funeral service with greater meaning and effectiveness.
