What if your phone truly helped you connect with people more than disconnect with those around you? You CAN dare to be relationally different in a screen-to-screen culture. But honestly, I like my phone. So what should I do? You probably enjoy screens but don't want them hurting your relationships with the people who matter most, right? What if you could improve your face-to-face relationships, develop deeper connections, resolve conflict and confidently communicate with friends, parents, teachers, roommates, coworkers, potential employers, even the barista at your local coffee shop? What if you paused to think before you posted, avoiding some of the hurt and consequences that almost always lead to regret after? What if you became a master of your own screen time instead of letting it master you? What if you became more screen-wise? 40 real-life realizations including: Your phone doesn't have an UNSEND button. Texting is a dumb way to manage conflict. We all need a digital detox every once in a while. Sometimes less is more. Phones are a great tool for connecting with people outside of the room when they don't interfere with the people inside the room. Sometimes the people we love the most are the people we ignored all day. Author and youth culture expert Jonathan McKee and his daughter Alyssa McKee uncover forty random realizations they've discovered over the last five years. Screens provide fun platforms to connect with faraway friends and sometimes the people we love the most are the people we ignore all day. Jonathan and Alyssa help young adults navigate face-to-face communication in a screen-to-screen world too. Maybe they'll help you navigate face-to-face communication in a screen-to-screen world too. Teen Communication Skills Workbook Ester Leutenberg, 2013. Interpersonal communication is the process of sending and receiving messages with another person. It sounds easy but it is not. For teens communicating effectively can be a very difficult process. The reason is that successful communication involves a very complex set of skills as complex as those necessary for driving a car or reading a map. Part of the reason for this complexity is that messages can be communicated and received in a variety of ways: i.e. listening, speaking, signing, touch, eye contact. Teens need adequate communication skills in order to survive and thrive in our challenging society. Effective communication skills are critical in many walks of life including: Developing and maintaining friendships, Participating in the community, Doing well in school, Functioning successfully in a group or family, Maintaining and succeeding on a job, Relating well with siblings, Maintaining close relationships. Teens these days do not have adequate practice at communicating with others because of the use of texting, social networking, email, and instant messaging.
