Fouad-Tarazi, 2012-12-06 Hypertension is the major cause of left ventricular hypertrophy While the electrocardiogram is an extremely insensitive measure of anatomic left ventricular hypertrophy it provides a time tested important marker of an adverse cardiovascular outcome There has been a recent temporal decrease in the incidence of electrocardiographic evidence of LVH even within the hypertensive population no doubt this is the result of large antihypertensive treatment experts Anatomical evidence of left ventricular hypertrophy is best documented pre morbidly using echocardiographic techniques It therefore appears that between 20 and 50 percent of the hypertensive population has left ventricular hypertrophy by echo cardiographic techniques The prognostic significance of the echocardiographically determined increase in left ventricular mass is just beginning to be evaluated Early information suggests that there is an increased rate of cardiovascular morbidity in patients with echocardiographic evidence of increased left ventricular mass However this information is only preliminary and as yet only a limited number of events have been reported Far more supporting information will be required before the full impact of echocardiographically detected left ventricular hypertrophy can be determined Nevertheless it must be stated that the electrocardiogram still has the greatest predictive value of cardiovascular morbid and mortal events when the pattern of left ventricular hypertrophy plus repolarization abnormalities are present
